

Egypt, Palestinians Reconciled

The New York Times

Beirut, Lebanon — Egypt and the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization have reached a broad understanding for cooperation in Lebanon and on the international scene after nine months of bitterly strained relations, according to informed Arab officials.

Sources close to Yasir Arafat, the PLO chief, said Wednesday that the main purpose of the understanding was to strengthen Arafat's hand in his resistance to what they called "a Syrian attempt to bring the Palestinian resistance movement in Lebanon under the control of Damascus."

The Egyptian-Palestinian reconciliation was brought about with the help of Saudi Arabia, the officials said. The Saudis have also been acting as mediators between Egypt and Syria and between the PLO leadership and Syria.

It's A Step Forward For Sadat

For President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt, the reconciliation with Arafat is the first step back from the isolation in which he has found himself within the Arab world since he signed the second disengagement agreement with Israel last September.

The Egyptian leader is expected here to adopt once more an assertive Arab nationalist stance in defense of the Palestinians.

Under the terms of the Egyptian-Palestinian understanding, more than 1,000 soldiers of the Egypt-based Am Jalout Brigade of the Palestine Liberation Army are known to have arrived in Lebanon to counterbalance the presence of As Sa'qa, the Syrian-controlled guerrilla organization, and of the Syrian-based units of the Palestine Liberation Army.

Secondly, Egypt acted at the express demand of the Palestinian leadership when it took the initiative to bring about a meeting of the United Nations Security Council in March to discuss the situation in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, informed Arab sources said.

Palestinians To Be Less Strident

The Palestinians in turn have agreed to tone down their public criticism of the disengagement agreement with Israel and specifically to refrain from personal attacks on Sadat, the sources said.

Finally, Egypt is understood to have promised to give the Palestinians control fairly soon of the Voice of Palestine radio station in Cairo, which was taken over by the Egyptian state radio last fall.

The first contingent of the Am Jalout Brigade had been sent by sea from Alexandria to the Syrian port of Latakia from where it was to move overland into northern Lebanon. But it was blocked and put back aboard ship by the Syrians, according to Palestinian sources.

Officers On Student Visas

The soldiers eventually reached the southern Lebanese port of Saida, which is under the control of Al Fatah, the largest commando group within the PLO. The officers were issued student visas and flew from Cairo to Beirut aboard commercial airliners, Palestinian sources said.

The first public indication of a reconciliation between Egypt and the Palestinian leadership came last Saturday when Sadat, in a speech in the City of Suez, went out of his way to praise the Palestinians.

Sadat declared, among other things, that the recent municipal elections in the Israeli-occupied West Bank had borne out the PLO's claim to be the sole representative of the Palestinians.

Wafa, the news agency of the PLO, in its first favorable comment about Egypt in nine months, praised Sadat's speech.

But As Sa'qa, the Syrian-controlled Palestinian commando group, attacked the Wafa commentary as did a spokesman for the extremist group headed by George Habash.

Fatah Man Dismisses Criticism

An official of Al Fatah, the largest and strongest group within the PLO, Wednesday dismissed the criticism by saying that the dissidents would eventually have to fall in line with Fatah's lead. Yasir Arafat is head of both Fatah and the parent organization, the PLO.

The official, in an interview, made it plain that the reconciliation with Egypt was a Fatah initiative.

5 Charged In Shooting Of Means

SIoux CITY, Iowa (AP) — Two men were charged with attempted murder and three others with being accessories in the shooting of American Indian Movement leader Russell Means and another man on Wednesday. FBI agents said.

They said Michael Weston, 18, and James Weddell, 19, both of Wagner, S.D., were charged with shooting Means and AIM member John Thomas at a housing project on an Indian reservation at Wagner about 4 a.m. Wednesday.

Gerald Black Elk Terry Provost and an unidentified juvenile were charged with being accessories after the fact of the shooting, the agents said.

They said the five were scheduled to appear before a U.S. magistrate in Sioux Falls, S.D., but no date was given.

The five were transferred from Sioux City to Sioux Falls on Wednesday night.

A sixth man was arrested with the five at a house in the northern part of Sioux City late Wednesday morning but was later released with no charges filed against him. Sioux City police confiscated weapons and ammunition from the house.

Means and Thomas were reported in satisfactory condition after surgery at Sacred Heart Hospital in Yankton, S.D.

Administrator Ron Morton said Means was hit in the lower chest by a single, small-caliber bullet which exited through his side without hitting any vital organs. There were no internal injuries, he said.

Thomas was hit in the face by a single bullet which cut through his nose and neck, Morton said.

Means was free on bond after being convicted on riot charges in Sioux Falls and one condition imposed by Circuit Court Judge Richard Braithwaite in granting Means freedom was that he refrain from participation in any AIM activities.

Braithwaite said Wednesday he had ordered an investigation into Means' presence on the reservation where he was shot.

Neighbors said the shooting took place out of doors after an argument developed at a party.

Reader Gives UNL Grad Extra Spots

The generosity of a Lincoln Star reader means that senior dentistry student Ron Stein won't have to toss a coin to see if his in-laws from Ireland or his parents from Iowa get to watch him graduate.

The Stein family received a phone call Wednesday morning from the mother of a graduating law student offering her family's commencement tickets to the Steins.

Stein's problem with tickets was used in a Wednesday Star story to show the student concern over the limited number of tickets available to graduating students for the Saturday University of Nebraska-Lincoln commencement exercises.

The university administration also took steps Wednesday to allow extra tickets for those students expecting more than four family members to attend the exercises at the sports complex.

A limit of five tickets for each graduating student was announced early this week after it became apparent that President Ford's visit to the commencement could cause a seating problem.

University officials Wednesday announced that graduates could get up to two extra tickets by contacting the UNL chancellor's office.

This change will allow more family members to attend graduation without first waiting in line outside the sports complex, said Dr. Larry Braskamp, assistant to the chancellor.

And students who have not been in Lincoln this week will be able to pick up tickets Saturday morning, Braskamp said.

Braskamp permanently laid to rest one student complaint that perhaps a block of tickets were going to local GOP headquarters.

No tickets have been requested nor have any been given to the Republican headquarters or the White House, Braskamp said.

For those Republicans and others without tickets, the commencement exercises including President Ford's speech will be broadcast on radio and television.

Coverage begins at 9:55 a.m. on KRNL-FM and 10:30 a.m. on Nebraska Educational Television KUNTV.

Abandoned Baby Boy Is 'Hungry As A Bear'

Folkston, Ga. (UPI) — A blue-eyed baby boy found abandoned and hungry as a bear along a snake and alligator-infested river bank won the hearts of nurses who took turns Wednesday pulling him around the hospital in a little red wagon.

A search was under way for the boy's parents, who authorities said may have had marijuana in their possession since traces of it were found on the child's diaper.

A couple fishing along the St. Marys River four miles south of Folkston spotted the blond-haired boy Tuesday, crawling two feet from the water which forms the Georgia-Florida line.

Nurses Call Him 'Butch'

Charlton County Sheriff Ray Gibson said he believed the child was 18 to 20 months old. But Charlton Memorial Hospital nurse Margaret Chamblee said she thought the boy, called Butch by the nurses, might be only 13 or 14 months old.

He's a beautiful little boy, said Mrs. Chamblee. I can't believe a mother would abandon a baby that way, not in a dangerous area like that near the river with the wildlife that is there.

She said the boy was in good condition although he had a slight chest congestion, a few bruises and a cut on his chin which required four stitches. Gibson said the scratches probably occurred during the 2 to 8 hours the child apparently spent on the river bank before he was found.

The boy, 31 inches long and weighing 25 pounds, was also covered with insect bites from the ordeal.

We found absolutely nothing at the scene to indicate who he was or where he came from, said Gibson. His mother and father could be killed and thrown in the river or they could have just left him there.

But Gibson admitted his gut feeling was the boy was abandoned. He said traces of marijuana were found on the child's diaper.

I don't know if he crawled around in a vehicle that had marijuana in it or possibly someone hid some marijuana in his diaper, said Gibson. My gut feeling is that some sorry old hippies just drove off and left him. But maybe some man abducted the mother and just threw him out and the mother is not at fault.

Not Far From Big Swamp

He said the spot where the boy was found about 30 feet off U.S. 1, not far from the Okefenokee Swamp, which is infested with alligators, water moccasins and wild bear.

He said when he arrived the boy was on his hands and knees bawling his head off. He was close to the water. It's a wonder he didn't fall in.

The main thing wrong was that he was hungry as a bear.

Mrs. Chamblee said nurses alternated sitting with the boy and taking him for rides in a little red wagon. He's bright, she said. He's not a child that's been abused.

Reagan: It Takes Time For Issues To Develop

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Bouncing across Nebraska on his charter aircraft, Ronald Reagan Wednesday sipped on a 7-Up and savored the sweet taste of his day-old victories in three primary states.

It takes time for the issues to get established, he said in an interview while his campaign plane hopped from McCook to North Platte on a warm and gusty day.

It takes time to get people to understand and to take a position themselves.

Reagan said he had always expected to begin to make his move as the primaries shifted to the South and West, but he also thinks he did better than hoped for in the earlier Eastern primary states.

Now he is ahead in the Republican presidential delegate count.

Keep On Plugging

I know we're behind here, the former California governor noted. But we'll keep on plugging and see what happens.

Reagan took his campaign from Lincoln to Kearney, McCook, North Platte and Scottsbluff Wednesday, attracting enthusiastic overflow crowds at most stops.

Perhaps his most rousing reception came at McCook where 2,000 persons jammed the city auditorium and gave him a noisy welcome complete with a band, banners and red, white and blue bunting.

Polls 'Hard To Believe'

It's hard to believe those Nebraska newspaper polls are accurate after the last stop he smiled as his plane headed for North Platte.

Reagan said he can understand Sen. Carl Curtis' decision to support President Ford in the Nebraska primary, even though he has been very friendly to me and has always expressed great approval.

But Curtis has had many years of association in Washington, Reagan said, and there is kind of a buddy system there.

Reagan and Curtis worked closely together on Barry Goldwater's 1964 presidential campaign.

As for Goldwater, Reagan admitted that he is personally hurt by the Arizona senator's increasing attacks on his candidacy.

Goldwater Puzzling

I prefer not to comment on Barry, he said, the lines in his brow deepening. I don't understand him at all.

What Nebraska Republican voters should consider now, Reagan said, is whether Ford or Reagan would be the best chance of winning in November, he suggested.

It looks more and more like Jimmy Carter will be the one who stands in the way of the third straight Republican presidential victory, Reagan noted.

How would Republicans defend an administration which has presided over the greatest deficit in history?

Looking back at his own stint as governor, Reagan said, I would not have a record of deficit spending to defend.

Keep Not Balancer

If he does prevail at the GOP national convention in August, Reagan said, he would not choose a vice-presidential running mate who would provide philosophical balance for the Republican ticket.

There could be an effort to balance geography, he said.

But I have never agreed with the tradition of choosing a running mate from the opposite end of the spectrum.

If the party chose you, that means it agrees with your programs and your policies.

There would be an obligation to resign and someone who would guarantee that there would be continued if the president is elected.

Budweiser Supply Short

By The Associated Press

New Yorkers carried out their own garbage. San Franciscans walked instead of rode and car buyers opened trunks on their new autos to find — surprise — no spare tire. All were victims of labor troubles.

In taverns around the country, Budweiser beer was in short supply because of a two-month-old strike by beer bottlers at the nine breweries of Anheuser-Busch, Inc.

Thirty thousand New Jersey bus commuters also lived with the inconvenient by-products of a strike as employees of two bus lines stayed home, and university students in Madison, Wis., coped with problems that arose with 300 food service workers off their jobs.

Figures for this week were not available, but the Federal Mediation Service reported 308 strikes involving 137,245 workers nationwide in the week ending April 28. The agency said it expected the figures to be somewhat higher for the seven-day period ending Wednesday.

About 60,000 rubber workers began drawing $35-a-week strike benefits Wednesday as their strike against the Big Four of the tire and rubber industry entered its third week.

Meanwhile, Ford and General Motors began shipping cars and light trucks without spare tires to keep assembly lines rolling. The spares will be sent to dealers when available, the companies said.

Even Giggling Teenagers Are Awed By Liberty Bell

By JOHN JUSTIN SMITH
(c) Chicago Daily News

Philadelphia — Three teenagers — two girls and a boy — giggled and clowned around as they waited in line to see the Liberty Bell.

Then, when their turn came, they walked to the bell and suddenly their mood changed.

Their faces became solemn. They said nothing.

The young man reached out and let his fingers trail along the bell's famous crack.

After a minute, they walked away and they were changed, subdued and perhaps awed.

So it went during an hour's visit to the Liberty Bell. People of all sizes, ages, colors and persuasions approached the ill-made bell.

A guide invited them to touch it and most did. The hands offered caresses. Red, white and blue sentiments were reflected in nearly every face.

As for patriotism, this was the holiest ground

Jury Acquits Moore, Aide

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. and a former aide were acquitted by a federal jury Wednesday of extortion charges.

The seven-woman, five-man jury deliberated slightly more than seven hours before finding Moore and former aide William H. Loy innocent of charges of extorting a $25,000 campaign contribution from Theodore R. Price, former president of Diversified Mountaineer Corp. in 1972.

Price was seeking a state bank charter, which he never received.

As the clerk in the U.S. District Court room read the verdict, spectators burst into applause and cheers. Judge Joseph Young reprimanded the spectators and then thanked the jury for its work.

Neither Moore nor Loy looked at the jurors or showed any immediate reaction to the verdict. Moore said he would have no immediate comment but smiled broadly as he accepted congratulations from staff members and state employees who packed into the courtroom.

Washington (AP) — The Soviet Union has probably stopped buying U.S. grain for a while after purchasing more than 4.9 million metric tons the past week, a senior Agriculture Department official said Wednesday.

Assistant Secretary Richard E. Bell said, however, that he expects that Russia will resume grain purchases in the near future and then probably will concentrate on wheat and corn from the forthcoming 1976 U.S. harvests.

found during a 2,400-mile bicentennial ramble.

You'll find somewhat the same awe as people approach the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, all housed in the National Archives in Washington.

But the Liberty Bell is indeed something special. People seem shocked by it — and perhaps shocked at themselves for finding they have patriotic sentiments in this age when some consider patriotism not cool and unwanted.

Why this is so isn't easy to explain. It certainly isn't because the bell is dramatically displayed. Last Jan. 1, the bell was moved from Independence Hall to its own building a block in front of the hall. The bell's new steel-and-glass home has been severely criticized.

A typical comment: "If you put a golden arch over it, people would ask for hamburgers."

The bell itself isn't very dramatic. It's about 5 feet high and weighs 2,080 pounds, probably smaller than you thought.

'Filthy' Cookies, Juice Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of cases of cookies, graham crackers and grapefruit juice are being recalled nationwide because they are contaminated with rodent hairs and filth, the Food and Drug Administration said today.

The agency announced that 1,450 cases of 46-ounce cans of sweetened grapefruit juice produced by Lykes Pasco Packing Co., Dade City, Fla., contain rodent parts and filth, and 20,875 cases of cookies and graham crackers baked by Bremner Biscuit Co., Louisville, Ky., are contaminated with rodent hairs.

The grapefruit juice cans were coded M19-MA and M19-MB and were marketed under the following labels: A&P Aunt Nellie's, Garden Charm, Golden Isle, Hyde Park, Ideal Acme, Kinston, Loblaw's, Our Family, Pomco, Shurfine, Thrift Maid, Town Pride, Unity, Bonimart, Libby's, and Malkins.

The Bremner recall involves 3,830 cases of vanilla cookies, 3,399 cases of chocolate cookies, 3,311 cases of lemon cookies and 10,335 cases of graham crackers. They were coded JUN followed by 1176, 1776, 1276, 1476, 1676, 1376 or 1876, or JUL followed by 2976.

The cookies and crackers were marketed under the following labels: Princess Creme Vanilla Cookies, Lenox Park Creme Vanilla Cookies, Oven Krisp Vanilla Sandwich Cookies, Ovenjoy Creme Vanilla, Lenox Park Creme Chocolate Cookies, Oven Krisp Chocolate Sandwich Cookies, Ovenjoy Creme Devil's Food Cookies, Lenox Park Creme Lemon Cookies, Oven Krisp Lemon Sandwich Cookies, Ovenjoy Creme Lemon Cookies, Princess Creme Lemon Cookies, Bremner's Sugar Honey Graham Crackers, Dutch Valley Sugar Honey Grahams, Food Club Sugar Honey Grahams, Oven Krisp Sugar Honey Grahams, Red Owl Golden Honey Grahams, Red & White Sugar Honey Grahams, Scot Lad Sugar Honey Grahams, Sunny Square Sugar Honey Grahams, A&P Sugar Honey Grahams, Finast Sugar Honey Grahams, IGA Sugar Honey Grahams, Rokeach Sugar Honey Grahams, Roundy's Sugar Honey Grahams, Camelot Sugar Honey Grahams and Monarch Sugar Honey Grahams.

NFO Pleased By Ruling In Its Favor

Des Moines (UPI) — The National Farmers Organization said Wednesday it was pleased with a U.S. District Court ruling which said the Iowa Grain Trust was a legal entity separate from the NFO and can make payments to persons who placed grain with it to be marketed.

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission had argued the now-defunct grain trust was an integral element of the NFO marketing operation and therefore was not a separate entity, but U.S. District Judge William Stuart ruled otherwise.

The SEC, which said the NFO should not be allowed to disburse funds from the trust, had filed suit against the NFO, contending it violated the federal securities and exchange act.

Stuart's ruling affects $2.5 million in the grain trust. Under terms of the ruling, $500 will be paid to each trust beneficiary and the rest will be distributed among beneficiaries in proportion to their remaining interest.

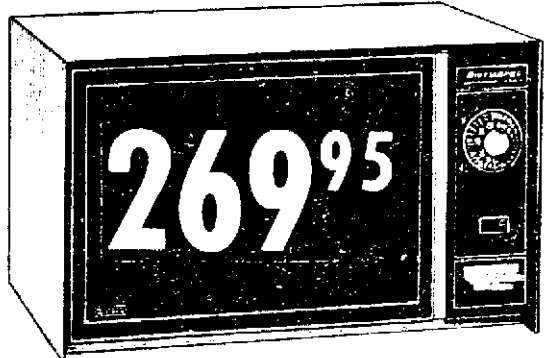

Stuart gave the SEC 30 days to appeal the decision.

"We're very pleased with said because students have behaved so well this year, he has decided to reward them. Besides, there is only one open day on the school calendar."

He said there has been little

'No' To Charter Changes

The Charter Revision Committee and the City Council have proposed three amendments to Lincoln's Home Rule Charter which taken together or separately would have no clearly beneficial effect on community residents.

In The Star's opinion, the committee and the council wasted their collective time and the taxpayers' money in offering the proposals to city voters next Tuesday and for their efforts they should be rewarded with the defeat of all three.

Amendment One provides that the City Council may without petition, order in street and related improvements and assess the cost against property owners if it is determined that the improvement is in the interest of the health, safety and welfare of the residents located within a district.

At present petition by a majority of property owners is needed to order improvements on most streets. Amendment One, if approved, would strip property owners of their say in the matter and allow the council to tell residents what is best for them and then charge them for it.

This is a manifestation of the Paving Uber Alles philosophy beloved by many of fireholders and bureaucrats in City Hall.

Lincoln voters should resist such a blatant power grab on the part of City Hall engineers and the council and vote against Amendment One. The petition route for street improvements has served well enough for years.

Amendment Two would remove the requirement that 5% of the gross revenues of the Lincoln Electric System (LES) be paid annually in lieu of taxes to the city, county and school district.

Such payments this year total well over $1 million and in lieu of tax payments if continued, would steeply increase.

LES wants to do away with the in lieu of tax payments so that it can hold down future electric rate increases. We can't blame them for that, it is an attempt at better public relations.

But the relief accruing to the electric ratepayer is excess burden dumped on the property taxpayer.

We can't see that approval of the amendment would result in a more equitable situation for the broad spectrum of Lincolmites.

It is a cosmetic amendment at best — designed to make LES look good. But in the process, it will make the school district look bad. People who don't pay property taxes but who use a lot of electricity obviously would benefit from passage of the amendment. But the mix of blessings and burdens is too jumbled for anyone to determine whether the amendment is in the best interests of the majority of Lincolmites.

We suspect it is, rather, a case of being in the best interests of the electric system. Another argument against Amendment Two is that rates for energy should not be artificially reduced at a time when conservation of energy should be encouraged.

A vote against Amendment Two is suggested.

Amendment Three eliminates the requirement that a subdivision permit be obtained before a tract of five acres or less could be divided into two or more lots or tracts for sale or transfer, and in lieu thereof allow the City Council to determine by ordinance, the minimum lot, tract or parcel size which shall be required for a subdivision permit.

Allow the City Council to determine.

Enough said. There appears to be no substantial reason for any of the three proposed charter amendments to be approved. Against votes are recommended.

Boom Now, Bust Later

Ronald Reagan has to be encouraged by his narrow but tremendously important primary victory in Indiana and by the number of delegates he picked up there and in Georgia and Alabama to assume the lead over President Ford.

The contest for the Republican presidential nomination is very much a ball game and it could be lost by the President if his campaign does not make a remarkable turnaround.

But as encouraged as Reagan is by his recent primary victories, it is fervently hoped that he isn't therefore more encouraged to further develop his numbskull foreign policy which features risking war over the Panama Canal. Next he may advocate sending a gunboat up the Yangtze. Anything for a cheer from the un-reconstructed Goldwaterites — but even Barry isn't applauding any more. He thinks Reagan's views on the canal issue spring from ignorance or "a dangerous state of mind" and could lead to war.

As much as many Americans admire macho and tough talk, we don't think as a people Americans yearn for war. We think most Americans would put the emphasis on negotiating for the protection of our interests in the canal and elsewhere rather than chest-beating and implied threats.

What is discouraging about the Reagan phenomenon is the feeling it must leave in the pit of the stomach of many mainstream Republicans who can sense the possibility of an exciting nominee but who must understand the futility of his message.

The Dragon Is Slain

PARIS — Something very unusual is going on in Britain's nuclear program. It is difficult to conclude from available details on this highly classified subject whether recent developments should be linked to London's strategic planning.

They are more probably related to efforts at supporting the economy to preparations for a 'European atomic weapons pool' with France or even to political fears that U.S. neo-isolation may curb access to vital materials on which the United Kingdom has hitherto depended.

Consider the following apparently unrelated facts: 1. London's ministry of defense announced it would halt imports of weapons grade tritium, a radioactive isotope of hydrogen gas purchased for 20 years from the United States. 2. It became known that a seven-nation London agreement controlling export of nuclear materials was running into trouble with the Common Market's nuclear agency, Euratom. 3. Britain for months interred in the Organization of Economic Coordination and Development (OECD) Thursday, The Dragon, a unique installation.

Why are the British giving up their guaranteed American source of tritium and constructing their own facilities at Chapelcross and Galloway in the U.K.? Britain is broke and curbing almost every other expenditure including The Dragon — of which more later. Is the change to create jobs, to save money by saving dollars, to make a brand new secret weapon, or to safeguard against the fear of a sudden American cut-off?

Or is it to free Britain from U.S. restrictions thus allowing it to go ahead with an oft-mentioned never agreed plan to join France in building a European nuclear force pooled by the two countries? Fusion warheads like those based on tritium have virtually no fallout unlike fission weapons based on uranium and plutonium. This is vital in considering the defense of tiny, populated Europe.

As for the Common Market flap, Washington inspired secret meetings last year to work out a secret accord between three Euratom members (Britain, France, West Germany) and four other nations (the U.S.A., Russia, Canada and Japan) restricting exports of specialized nuclear materials.

But the other six Common Market partners were told nothing about their three partners' deal until last week. Why not? Also why were they informed last week? Above all, why did London and Paris spurn a Bonn suggestion that reference to Euratom (Common Market nuclear branch) be made in the original pact?

Finally there is the strange

Dragon case. This is a unique nuclear reactor built in Britain for the benefit of OECD members. It is the world's only versatile high temperature experimental nuclear facility and could attain temperatures of 1,000 degrees centigrade as compared with 300 to 500 achieved by ordinary nuclear reactors.

With the Dragon's technology it would be possible to produce metals like iron or aluminum directly from their ores by heat itself — like global creation — instead of by indirect electrical processes. The Dragon potentially could gasify coal or produce hydrogen as a fuel.

In the nuclear energy field the Dragon's demise is compared by scientists with the kind of faulty judgment which in the political field led to Watergate. The remarkable facility itself born in 1959 thanks to an OECD protocol, came into operation five years later in Winfrith, Heath, England. It was named for the renowned hot breath of the mythical dragon.

Why was it killed? The slaughter was allegedly pushed by Britain's energy minister as a money saving gimmick. Is it worth the price to international knowledge? It will delay for years the advance of some types of beneficial research. Will another Dragon have to be constructed at far greater expense later on?

LA VERNA
HASSLER

Now we see it. April's green achievement has been building up to May's fulfillment. The Hopa flowering crabs, the red-buds and lilacs flaunt their beauty with gay abandon. Spring is at least three weeks earlier than usual but I am ready for the bright corners of color after the many days of chill and dampness when we were without electricity.

Though the tulips are gone, their splash of color was rewarding. I was somewhat disappointed in their flowering this spring. I reset the bulbs last fall after digging them in July. Many of them did not blossom, at all. The daffodils were a bigger disappointment. None of them bloomed this spring.

Perhaps I neglected talking to them when I cared for them and they were being downright stubborn in return. Now that they refused to bloom this spring, they may hear some things they don't want to hear for my language may be a bit strong.

I laughed in spite of myself when I visited the garden department of a very large store in the city. I was browsing among the roses and shrubs, the fruit trees and ornamentals, tempted to buy but disregarding the thought because of no space in the yard. When I approached the flowering plants, the temptation grew greater. Row upon row of green sprigs bubbled over the wooden frames. Then my eyes fell upon something that looked very familiar — something that I have been chopping from my yard for years hoping to eradicate it forever.

Could it be catnip, I thought. I read the label. Sure enough, clear and plain, it was written, "Catnip." I rubbed a leaf between my fingers to double-check. Phew! The same noxious weed I have been struggling to rid my yard of for years and years only to find another sprig appear in another corner.

I was aghast. "This plant is being sold for money?" I asked another green-thumb gardener standing beside me.

"Yes, and I have been trying to kill it in my yard for years," she answered.

"Have you found a solution to your problem?" I asked, hoping she would share her secret with me.

"No, I just keep on hoeing it out every year but it comes back the following spring."

I shook my head, thinking of the fortune I have been throwing over the fence each spring, watching it smolder and hopefully go up in smoke for all time.

Now, catnip has a status symbol, I suppose. It is included in off-nation's gross national profit. To my way of thinking, it has to make a profit. Many a 'fat cat' and not the feline kind will be made because of the catnip bit. All I can say of this is, "I wish I had thought of it."

Lincoln, Neb.

Both appointed President Ford and Jimmy Carter campaigned like drowning rats in Indiana.

Ford says he's brought us out of the deepest depression and recession in 40 years. Jimmy Carter is promising amnesty to deserters of the Vietnam action. He is following in the footsteps of McGovern. He tells each group at each stop what the people of the area want to hear. Hoo-boy!

Carter is winning only with a small per cent of the Democratic vote, so there must be 53% to 88% who are voting against him.

I'm still for Governor George C. Wallace or Ronald Reagan. I know what they have accomplished as governors of their home states.

Believe It Or Not

Lincoln, Neb.

During the County Board's meeting Tuesday, April 27, Commissioners Jan Gauger and Bruce Hamilton voted to forget about all the tax dollars they have spent trying to meet state health and fire requirements at Westview.

Commissioner Bob Cohn urged Gauger and Hamilton not to close Westview and challenge the state on the run-around they had been receiving. Commissioners Gauger and Hamilton refused and voted to forget the money and close Westview.

On April 28 The Star reported that the County Board had decided to challenge state bureaucracy because the state is requiring curtains at Lancaster Manor. To forget the hundreds of thousands of dollars spent at Westview, and turn around the same day and gripe about a few curtains at Lancaster Manor!

I think this would have been a good article for the old Believe It Or Not column we used to read years ago in the paper by Ripley.

Political Circus Arena

Lincoln, Neb.

I am a graduating senior from Schuyler, Nebraska, in the College of Law. I am very unhappy over President Ford's scheduled appearance at Saturday's graduation exercises.

Normally I would be thrilled and honored that the President would come and speak at my graduation. However, this appearance is totally motivated by politics. Ford wouldn't even consider such an appearance but for the Nebraska primary May 11. Ford is using the power of the presidency, which enables him to dictate such an appearance, and the people of Nebraska for his own political purposes.

Graduation day should belong to the graduates. They deserve the honors and the publicity. Candidate Ford should not come in and steal the show for political purposes. People come to graduation to see their sons and daughters graduate. Ford, in effect, is forcing himself upon a captive audience. Can't Ford draw a crowd on his own?

With tickets added security, etc. the 1976 NU graduation has been turned into a circus and a political rally. Ford's old political cronies, Varner, has some explaining on how this graduation appearance by the President came about.

The university should call up the President and cancel the appearance.

Mr. Golden, Helpful

Lincoln, Neb.

After spending 2½ hours trying to obtain a title to a new vehicle I felt compelled to write this letter to let people know exactly how our county clerk, elected by the people, deals with the public.

I visited the county clerk's office four times and still did not have my title because each time I went they told me I needed another document. All this happened because I completed the portion at the bottom of the title that requested the name of the lien-holder.

I finally called County Clerk Carl Hartman and requested an explanation. I was told that I probably wouldn't understand. I asked that he try to explain it. That I read the manual put out by the Motor Vehicle Division and it stated that to register your car you must first apply for a new title, completing the information requested regarding the lien-holder. It said nothing about the additional documents needed to support this information. Mr. Hartman told me that since I had access to a manual I should read that instead of bothering him.

When I asked why the staff had not told me about additional documents he told me his staff probably didn't know and couldn't answer questions if they weren't asked. Finally Mr. Hartman told me I had wasted 20 minutes of his time and he thought that was enough — and he hung up.

Because I happen to know Mr. Frank Golden, our county treasurer, I asked him if he could assist me. As usual he was more than willing to help me. Next morning, within 45 minutes, I had a truck licensed, a camper permit and was on my way back to my office. But what do people do who don't have someone to help them?

I help to pay Mr. Hartman's salary and I resent the fact that I was treated so rudely by him on the telephone.

DISGUSTED TAXPAYER

similar idea I can be cruising in the Caribbean in my retirement years.

Well, so much for wishful thinking. Coming down out of my ivory tower into my kitchen, I find tender spears of asparagus waiting in the sink to be washed and cut for dinner. It will be creamed asparagus on toast and a slice of ham fried until it curls around the edge. Dessert? That may also come under the heading of wishful thinking. I can think of a number of things telling me that we do not need one. First of all, it is a rainy, chilly day which will keep us house-bound allowing for no vigorous out-of-doors labor in which to work off the excess calories. Secondly we do not need the calories in the first place. Thirdly the rhubarb that I intended to gather from the garden cannot be picked because of the mud and continued rain.

The fourth reason takes a bit of imagination to verify. The recipe I wanted to make is a delicious sounding rhubarb torte... quite different and involved. It is in one of the eight or nine magazines recently accumulated on the table by the easy chair I read through them hastily several days ago making a mental note of recipes I wanted to try.

Later, I will read them slowly and thoroughly. Perhaps a rainy, chilly day such as today. If I read the magazines today, I will not have the time to make the dessert. The sun may be shining tomorrow and other tasks will need my attention, hence the magazines will not be read.

So it boils down to dessert or a nice soft easy chair with a magazine in hand. I think I vote for the latter.

Time Of Honor And Pride

Lincoln, Neb.

To graduate from college after years of work is an honor. To hear and see the President of the United States is an honor. To have grandparents, parents, in-laws, relatives and friends unable to watch a loved one graduate is an injustice and a shame.

I'm a graduating senior and my family and friends like most of the other graduating seniors' families have been planning and looking forward to the May 8 commencement with anticipation and excitement. Now no one but my parents and two other people will be allowed to attend.

All this occurs because the university at the last moment (without consulting or considering the graduating seniors' opinions or feelings) have decided to switch speakers and allow President Ford to speak (and thereby campaign). All graduating seniors get five tickets, one for themselves and four for family and or friends and no extra tickets are available. Surely university officials MUST realize that most seniors have more than four relatives and friends who wish to see them graduate.

Why didn't the university continue to have two ceremonies so that more seats would be available at each ceremony? Why doesn't President Ford appear somewhere else to get his political rally and support? He has merely capitalized upon a captive, pre-gathered audience. It seems to be the sentiment among the graduates that the university has pulled another fast one on us. A time of honor, family pride and real achievement has turned into a cheap publicity stunt for a presidential candidate three days before a primary.

I urge everyone — seniors, parents, concerned citizens — regardless of political affiliation or presidential candidate preference to protest, by letters to the university, phone calls to the chancellor or other means, this injustice which is being done by the university to the graduating seniors and their loved ones.

Is this what we worked so hard to achieve — that when we are honored, many of our friends and loved ones are barred from attending because so many sightseers out to glimpse a President invade a personal, important commencement and take the seats of MY grandparents and MY family?

Doniphan Protests Power Plant

Doniphan, Neb.

I wonder how many citizens of Hastings and Grand Island are aware of what is happening to the people of Doniphan, in regard to the new power plant. The city fathers of those towns have picked proposed sites within one mile of the city limits to erect the power plant.

We are not a community that objects to industry. We have reaped the laurels from them the same as Hastings and Grand Island, with the building of William Bros., Trojan and Donnan's.

Many of the people involved in the project will live in those fair cities, but the possibility exists that we would get a large influx of workers. We cannot accept the added burden of an increase in our school system without a large rebuilding program, improving our sewer and water systems and enlarging our fire protection plan. This would be a large tax increase for our people with a decrease in revenue. This 640-acre site is taxed at $7,000 and brings in approximately $200,000 annual revenue.

Now to the pollution. Doniphan is in the middle of the pollution area. The power plant is in the middle of rich-growing cornfields so vital to our economy and others. The amount of water necessary to run this operation couldn't help but lower the water level so vital to our irrigation. This is a large coal-burning operation. It makes one wonder what is going to happen to our citizens and cornfields.

I am sure somewhere in this country are 640 acres that are not populated nor so vital to our economy where this plant could be constructed.

As our little village is making plans to celebrate our bicentennial we think back to our forefathers and take perspective on how it all started.

Getting away from oppression was the name of the game putting up with oppression is the name of the game now.

If this power plant goes through, the people of Doniphan won't have much to celebrate this Fourth of July because a little part of their freedom has been taken away.

Correcting An Impression

Lincoln, Neb.

Our thanks for The Star's thoughtful editorial which appeared on April 22, and also for the story which appeared the previous morning.

In reference to the article I would like to correct the mistaken impression that approval of plans by the State Department of Roads is slowing progress.

The Department of Roads has been most co-operative and is not slowing progress in any respect. I have stated before that there is no Department of Roads funding going toward the project but their expertise in construction, engineering, design and maintenance has been very important in ensuring that the sculptures are built to withstand the ravages of time and Nebraska weather.

'New, Invisible Bureaucracy' Spawned By Government

By VICTOR WILSON
(c) Newhouse News Service
Washington — In the past 20 years, during which the federal budget jumped from $70 billion to some $370 billion, the number of fulltime government workers has remained more or less constant.

A bad joke? Not according to Daniel Guttman and Barry Willner, practicing attorneys. They obtained the figures from the Office of Management and Budget here for a study on government expenditures.

The study shows that instead of swelling the civil service bureaucracy to get its daily job done, the government now farms out most of its work. Private industry gets about $60 billion annually in contracts. State, local governments, non-profit organizations, universities and "think-tanks" receive about $50 billion yearly in outright grants.

The result has been, Guttman and Willner write in "The Shadow Government," creation by the government of a "new, invisible bureaucracy." Its numbers are unknown — only the numbers of dollars they collect.

It's 'An Incredible Array'

This grant and outlay system, the authors say, "pays not only for the costly weapons systems and high-technology equipment, but for an incredible array of hardware and services — food and fuel, paper and paint, construction and repair work, guards' services and trash collections."

A smaller but significant amount of federal funds is also spent yearly to purchase managerial "expertise," Guttman and Willner write. "In most cases, the government buys such expertise from private corporations which stock experts as if they were assembly-line commodities."

But there is no evidence, the authors say, to show that the more expensive outsiders are any better — if as good — as ordinary bureaucrats.

$110 Billion Administered

Today, the two lawyers estimate, the government has on its regular Civil Service payroll almost 80,000 persons whose full-time jobs are to administer the $110 billion in farmed-out contracts and grants.

Guttman, who attended Yale Law School, where he became an instructor in political science, now is a practicing attorney in Washington. Willner attended Georgetown University Law Center here, was an editor of its "Law Journal" and now practices in New York.

They won B.A. degrees summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa at the University of Rochester and Lafayette College, respectively.

The authors say these off-the-federal-payroll jobs run the gamut from accountants to zipper-fabricators. Education attainments range from day-laborers to reputed super-experts on any subject. Salaries will run up to $100,000 or more annually, far above the $40,000 or a bit more than the limit for executives on Civil Service pay scales.

Guttman and Willner list shoals of contractors ranging from the Rand Corp. "think-tank" through the likes of Westinghouse, Computer Sciences Corp. and Boeing. Most states and many local governments receive varying grants for specific projects, while many prominent non-profit organizations, universities and colleges depend upon fund-grants to help them stay in the black financially.

Pentagon Biggest Source

While the Defense Department, the authors say, "is the largest single source of federal contract dollars," they cite an outside report which states, "There is no effective control of contract studies within the department."

The Health, Education and Welfare Department (HEW), largest of the non-military departments, can report on "man-years" in dollars spent for "direct hire" of employees, the writers say. But "for the most part," HEW itself reports, "agencies of the department do not keep records of non-federal employees supported by their grants and contracts."

Guttman and Willner call research and development (R&D) work "a contract sport." In a typical year, 1973, they say, more than $15 billion was spent by the government on R & D. $4.5 billion were allotted to federal industrial installations, and $8 billion to contracts to private industry. The balance, they say, was handed out in grants to universities and other non-profit organizations.

In an introduction to the book, consumer advocate Ralph Nader says it demonstrates unmistakably the sharp need for Congress to take remedial action "to halt this massive delegation of money and power to private interests by the executive branch of the government."

Nuclear Pessimist Is Now Optimistic About Future

The New York Times

New York — The message is unfashionably optimistic, delivered by a man who became famous analyzing the most pessimistic of possibilities: nuclear war.

The medium is Herman Kahn's latest book, "The Next 200 Years," conceived by the Hudson Institute futurologist and his associates as an answer to the doomsday theorists. The book was unveiled at a conference at Rockefeller University.

Human society, as Kahn sees it, is well on its way to the millennium. Or in Kahn's words, "200 years ago almost everywhere human beings were comparatively few, poor and at the mercy of the forces of nature, and 200 years from now, we expect, almost everywhere they will be numerous, rich and in control of the forces of nature."

Some Obstacles Possible

While there may be some obstacles on the road from here to there, Kahn sees the way as essentially clear. He expects world population growth to peak in the next five years and world economic growth to reach its height a few years later, with both gradually stabilizing in the 22nd century at a level of unprecedented affluence.

The world's resources, Kahn's analysis shows, are more than sufficient to meet the food, energy and raw material needs of the expected population of 15 billion by 2176.

Most of the participants at the symposium generally supported this sanguine outlook for world resources, including Donald A. Paarlberg, director of agricultural economics at the Agriculture Department and an authority on the world food situation.

Focus On Present Helps Future

Adam Yarmolinsky of the University of Massachusetts warned, however, that the "dangers of complacency may be as great as, or even greater than, the dangers of despair." People have a better chance of achieving an idyllic future, he added, if they focus as well on the more pressing problems of the present, including the loss of confidence in rational attempts to deal with them.

Kahn himself has conceded that his book is "a very limited book" that attempts only to refute the Malthusian notion that population and economic growth are on a collision course with a scarcity of resources.

It does not deal with what Kahn sees as "the real issues," which are questions of ideology and understanding.

World Environment Is A Worry

He is particularly concerned with the possibility of inadvertent damage to the global environment, such as unforeseen changes in climate, and with the risk of nuclear war, "the largest single problem facing mankind."

But the major theme of "The Next 200 Years" is that the world is a place of abundance, not scarcity, so Kahn calls on Americans to stop feeling guilty about consuming 40% of the Earth's raw materials although Americans are only 6% of its population.

Ford's Child-Care Veto Stands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Wednesday failed by three votes to override President Ford's veto of a $125 million child-care bill.

The Senate vote was 60 to 34, short of the needed two-thirds majority to override. It followed by one day a House vote of 301 to 101 to override the veto, 33 more than the required two-thirds in that chamber.

The measure would have granted states $125 million to meet new federal child day-care standards, while delaying implementation of the standards until July 1.

The standards set a minimum number of adult workers to care for children between the ages of six weeks and six years for the center to qualify for federal money. A previous suspension of these standards expired on Feb. 1, although they have yet to be put into effect.

In his veto message, Ford said the legislation would "not make day-care services more widely available. It would only make them more costly to the American taxpayer."

Ford has urged Congress to enact his own program under which states would set and enforce their own day-care standards. Republican opponents of the measure protested it extended federal regulation further into the lives of private citizens.

And Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., called it "bad planning and bad judgment," accusing Congress of failing to sense the "anti-Washington" mood of the people which he said was reflected in recent primary election votes.

"The states should set their own standards," Packwood said. "We aren't any smarter than the states."

But Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee which endorsed the measure, said the question is not whether to impose new federal standards.

"These standards were enacted by Congress and they are the law today," Long said.

Curtis, Hruska With Ford

Washington (AP) — Nebraska's Republican senators, Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska, voted with the majority Wednesday to uphold President Ford's veto of the child day-care bill. Tuesday, when the House voted to override the veto, Nebraska's three representatives split. Reps. Charles Thone and Virginia Smith voted to override, while Rep. John McCollister voted to sustain the veto.

Senate United For Continued Detente

Washington (AP) — The Senate approved a resolution Wednesday calling for a continuation of detente with the Soviet Union based on "unchallengeable" U.S. military strength.

Approval came 86 to 7 after the Senate voted 92 to 4 to add a section calling for the removal of Cuban troops from Africa and 91 to 0 to assert the principal that future agreements "not limit the United States to a position in strategic nuclear weapons inferior to limits provided for the Soviet Union."

The resolution was intended to signal continued support for the easing of tensions with the Soviet Union despite criticism of detente voiced by former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and some other candidates in the presidential primary elections.

It also was intended as a response to President Ford's recent action dropping the word "detente" from his official vocabulary.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said, "We in the Senate and all of us together in our country speak with many different and divergent voices. But all of us... are united in our desire for peace and our hatred of repression."

Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., said the resolution was essentially meaningless, despite his two amendments which he said "put some meat into this resolution."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., denounced it as a sign of weakness which he said would encourage forces in Panama seeking local control over the Panama Canal.

"I have a fear that adoption of this resolution will send a signal to a two-bit, puppet dictator in Panama that we don't intend to defend our rights there," Helms said.

Ford Delays His Veto Of Foreign Aid Bill

Washington (AP) — President Ford Tuesday delayed for a day or two his planned veto of a $4 billion foreign aid bill that would impose congressional controls on foreign sales of military equipment while opening trade with Vietnam for a trial period. White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the President delayed the veto to prepare a statement about his objections.

House Committee Votes Millions For Ag Research

Washington (UPI) — The House Agriculture Committee Wednesday approved legislation to expand federal spending on farm research despite warnings that one portion of the measure might invite a veto.

The overall research bill was approved by a unanimous voice vote after the committee, on a close 18-15 roll call, agreed to include a section designating $5 million in the next fiscal year for human nutrition research.

Rep. William C. Wampler, R-Va., a chief sponsor of the bill, noted that administration officials are opposed to providing research funds for specific fields. He warned that adoption of the human nutrition proposal by Rep. Matthew F. McHugh, D-N.Y., "could put the eventual enactment of this whole bill into jeopardy."

The overall bill would authorize Congress to boost appropriations for current agricultural research programs by nearly $100 million in the next fiscal year.

Ford Casts About For New Strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trailing in committed delegates and battered by four successive primary defeats, President Ford sought on Wednesday to find an election strategy that can throttle Ronald Reagan and save Ford the Republican nomination.

A chorus of congressional and staff advisers told Ford he must do better at emphasizing administration accomplishments and quit being diverted by Reagan's attacks on such issues as the Panama Canal.

But the challenging former California governor, stumping in Nebraska for votes in that state's primary next Tuesday, kept up his drumfire on the canal question and national defense.

Reagan's delegate sweeps in Georgia and Alabama on Tuesday were capped by a narrow popular vote victory but impressive delegate harvest in Indiana. Reagan won decisively in Texas on Saturday, but Indiana was his first primary victory in a non-Southern or Southwestern state.

The triple triumph catapulted him into the lead for national convention delegates over Ford, 360-292. Another 329 are uncommitted. The distance the race has to go is illustrated by the fact that 1,130 votes will be required for nomination at the national convention in Kansas City this August.

On the Democratic side, the Tuesday results were nearly as impressive for Jimmy Carter as for Reagan: he swept his home state of Georgia, won the bulk of Indiana delegates, and led in the District of Columbia, where no GOP contest was held.

Carter lost only in Alabama, where Gov. George C. Wallace salvaged at least home state support for his sagging campaign.

Carter's victories emphasized his status as the Democratic front-runner. Ford, though in the position of incumbent, found himself in second place, at least in terms of delegate count.

He told a news conference, however: "We think it's going to be a tough race but we expect to win."

Asked if he anticipated a first-ballot victory, Ford simply said: "I think we'll go to Kansas City and win."

Asked later why Ford did not say he would win on the first ballot, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said: "If he didn't, he meant to."

The President, after meeting with GOP leaders and his campaign manager, Rogers C.B. Morton, said Morton would conduct a campaign strategy reassessment.

Senate GOP leaders Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Robert P. Griffin of Michigan said Ford was advised to change his strategy.

Griffin said Ford has "found himself on the defensive a great deal. I don't think he should be using so much of his time answering Mr. Reagan."

A hallmark of Ford's campaigning has been question-and-answer sessions with large groups of citizens. The questions often have obviously been inspired by Reagan campaign statements.

Ford is expected to rely more on set speeches where he can better control the topics raised.

Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss said the string of primary defeats for Ford means the President has lost control of his party and the country.

He said he was confident the Democratic nominee would be determined before the party's convention begins July 12, but that the Republicans appear to be heading toward "that smoke-filled room." He envisioned a scenario with Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller calling the shots on who is nominated by the Republicans.

Timely Nursery Tips from Bob Campbell:

Now is the time to spray Austrian, Ponderosa & Mugho Pine for tip blight. Don't forget May 20 & June 20. You must spray with Bordeaux again to prevent needle caste of pines. At these times spray all varieties of Pines.

Also spray Peonies as they come through the ground with Bordeaux to prevent Peony Blight.

May 1st is the time to give the lawn a treatment of Diazinon to kill the adult Billbug Beetle—if the beetle is not killed at this time they will lay their eggs and the larvae will eat down the stems to the root zone killing large areas of lawn around the 4th of July.

Poll Shows: Carter Leading Reagan, 53-34

By LOUIS HARRIS

If the election had been held last month, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter would have beaten former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California by a decisive 53-34 margin in the same survey. Carter also led President Ford but by a much narrower 47-43.

In concentrating his run for the Republican nomination in the deep South states where the GOP is most heavily conservative, Reagan may have become an increasingly unviable candidate in November should he upset Gerald Ford and end up the GOP candidate.

Reagan takes only one group in his contest against Carter: the conservatives who choose him by 46-43. Carter is ahead of him among middle-of-the-road voters by 54-35 and among liberals by a lopsided 77-16.

Carter also wins every region of the country by at least a nine-point margin. Even in the deep South where Reagan has shown so much strength against the President, Carter beats Reagan by a clear 74-37. The Carter-Reagan race is closest in the West where the Georgian runs ahead by 49-40. The West is dominated by California, Reagan's home state.

The big difference in showings of President Ford and Reagan against Carter can be found among the following key groups:

— In the East, a Ford-Carter contest now stands at a flat-footed 44-44 tie while Carter leads Reagan by a decisive 54-28. But it is Reagan's weakness in the East and not Carter's strength that makes the difference.

— In the West, Ford runs well ahead of Carter by 50-39. But Reagan trails the Georgian in that region by 49-40.

— Among the college educated, the President leads Carter by a narrow 48-43. Carter has a one-sided 57-31 advantage over Reagan.

— Among business executives, the Ford lead over Carter is 51-42. However, Reagan trails

Principle, Precedent Seen in OSHA Case

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — To Donald Nelson who has spent three years and thousands of dollars fighting two $150 penalties for alleged violations of federal safety laws, it's a matter of principle.

For the Labor Department, which has spent three years and thousands of dollars without yet winning a penny from Nelson, it's a matter of precedent.

Nelson is head of the Donald K. Nelson Construction Co. which among other things digs trenches.

Three years ago a compliance officer from the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) said a ditch was unsafe because dirt taken from it — the berm — was stacked too close. It is supposed to be two feet from the trench.

A little later the same officer said another ditch 9 feet deep and 19 feet wide was dangerous and could collapse on workers.

The officer recommended $150 penalties for each of the alleged violations of federal safety laws.

I don't like it when I have a history of 15 years operation and I haven't lost one minute because of an accident to have some individual come out on the job and say, 'Hey, your trench is too narrow,' Nelson said.

I've spent over $2,300 fighting the two cases. The way I feel about it, right is right and wrong is wrong, and I don't care if it costs me $10,000 if I'm right, he said. We're not arguing dollars and cents, we're arguing principle.

Nelson said that since he is in the 50 per cent income tax bracket, the $2,300 actually costs him $1,150 and cost the government $1,150 in lost taxes.

Nelson won the unsafe trench case when a Labor Department administrative law judge agreed it was not in danger of collapsing.

We hired a certified soil engineer to dig it from top to bottom. He said it was as safe as if you were walking down the sidewalk, Nelson said. The Labor Department is not appealing this case.

The administrative law judge found against Nelson in the berm case, but an independent OSHA review commission reversed the decision in a 2-1 ruling. The commission said Nelson had not been adequately served with the citation.

The Labor Department, in an action against the review commission and Nelson, has appealed to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals where the case is pending.

The Department said it was unable to deliver the citation by mail, so an OSHA official gave the citation to Nelson's wife.

The precedent that the review commission set is burdensome and would cause us a great deal of problem, said Tom Korson, an attorney in the Labor Department office at Denver.

Basically this involves an issue of to what extent does a complaining party — in this case the Labor Department — have to serve the president of a corporation, Korson said.

When Nelson received the citation, he went to the OSHA office and told them he was contesting the action. He was told the regulations required he put that in writing.

I told them to jam it, said Nelson.

Korson said Nelson's failure to file written notification could further prolong the case.

Korson said the Labor Department holds that since notification of contest has to be transmitted to the review commission, it must be in writing.

He said that if the Court of Appeals upholds the Labor Department on serving of the citation, the review commission conveniently could rule against the department on the oral notification issue, and so it could be looking around for quite a while.

Nelson said: There's no way I can stand up and say I can last as long as the federal government can. But by the same token, I could have gotten off for $300. The government could have dropped the cases and been $1,150 ahead, plus the wages for the stupid individuals they sent out to inspect the jobs.

Crooks Had Good Taste

When a car broke into the Christian Dior store on 14th St. in Avenue M. on May 4, the crooks had good taste and fled with $220,000 worth of estimated merchandise.

Police pulled the car out from the tracks and threw them onto the sidewalk where waiting friends loaded them into a pickup truck.

Life Begins At Forty:

Lincolnite Likes Prime Time Title

By JOANNE FARRIS

A READER WRITES: The other day at the meat market I made an older man feel good with my remark. It wasn't a frivolous remark, but an attitude I have about age. I didn't realize how good it was until I saw the full impact it had on him and his co-workers. He was bemoaning the fact that he was no longer young and said: "Well, if I can live another 10 years I guess I'll be satisfied." I retorted, (half-scoffing), "Why, you can count on more good years than that — you're just at prime time now." His face lit up like sunshine, and his co-workers all smiled and chuckled and one remarked: "Lady, you sure made his day."

Well, how about it? "Prime Time" represents an important time. Isn't any age the most important time of one's life? It should be, I think.

So this is my suggested new name for your column which I read and enjoy — PRIME TIME. Signed: Mrs. Vince Kamrath, Lincoln, Neb.

COMMENT: Wow, you sure do know how to make a person feel great!

ANOTHER READER suggested the Prime Time title also. Her letter follows:

The title "Prime Time" could be appropriate in three different areas.

1. You can consider life after 40 as the prime of life. I can really believe this. When the family is raised, problems begin to lessen and parents can begin to live their lives as they wish again.

2. "Prime Time" can refer to the present time as the best time, much like the prime time on TV. We older people have to believe today is the best.

3. Prime can refer to priming as priming a pump — giving your readers a real boost. Do you like it? Signed Dorothy Barnett COMMENT: Yes, indeed, I do like it. Linda Leary also suggested Prime Time.

ANOTHER READER, Nina

Ruth Aiken, caught the influence of your number two interpretation of Prime Time. Her title suggestion is: "Life Begins Today." Julia Schutt suggested Life Begins Every Day, adding: "I think your column adds so much to everyone's life, young or old that this title would be appropriate."

Many of the readers who entered the "Suggest New Name" contest had kind things to say about the column. Since I write for all of you, I feel good when I know that you enjoy it.

Catherine Ratcliffe's letter reaches to the heart of what my column is all about: "I am a retired teacher who really enjoys your column," she wrote. "You have the ability to make a reader feel that you are writing a personal message to that person."

Laurin Davis had a little fun with the title contest, to wit: "I suggest the following name for your column: 'The Farris-Wheel of Life.' Since life is in some respects like a ferris wheel, starting at the bottom and working up to a peak and tapering off to an end to the ride. Your expressed desire to direct part of your columns toward the middle and senior age groups would come under this title as well as any other period of life. Of course, it is just a little play on words."

Another day I'll share some more of the many suggestions with you. My thanks to every person who took the time to write.

POSTCARD

by Stan
Delaplane

San Francisco — Back on Daylight Saving. Across the water at Snug Harbor, through the floor-to-ceiling windows, I can see my neighbor, Faggot, shaking up the evening martinis.

I said: "Pretty early for Faggot to be walking in Gin Lane. The sun's still up." Then I remembered: That added idea, that if you cut off one end of the string of Time and tie it to the other, the whole string will be longer.

Historians a million years from now will decide it was some worship of gods. A plea to get out of the Dark Ages.

If you told them: "It was so people could come home and play tennis later" — well, they'd drop the butterfly net on you.

Am still slogging through sixth grade homework. Fifth time. My own stretch on the rack and then child after child.

I said: "Blast it! They're changing questions. They're making it harder each year."

We are into something about dividing pears and apples with a sharp knife and then passing them around. So who gets an equal cut? Who's shorted out?

I said: "That is the chintziest piece of business I ever saw. Why not get a bag of pears and apples? Give each kid a pear and an apple."

"What he doesn't eat, he can throw in the garbage."

In an entire life of division — dividing money with the government, splitting too little money among too many creditors — I have never faced a problem of cutting up pears and apples.

My idea of education would be useable. You leave the car at the garage. When you come back, the mechanic is wiping his hands on only waste.

He says: "Well, it looks like you've got quite a bit of trouble here."

Thanks to your childhood education, you are able to say

"You mean this loose wire that leads to the distributor?"

You screw it back on. Step on the starter. Brrrr — the song of the contented cylinders. "Ta-ta, Garageman."

I was invited to talk to a journalism class. So I put on a tie and went over. (Who's going to take you seriously if you show up in an open collar?)

What can you really say about journalism? There's no mystery to it.

"Triple-space and write only on one side of the paper."

The triple-spacing is for the copy editors. Gives them room to pencil your best lines out. Write their own lines in.

Writing habits? Now if you tell the truth, you sound like an idiot or a braggart. Or both.

"At one time I wrote at a kitchen table. I had a Siamese cat who slept in the box where I kept the typing paper. Each time I needed a fresh sheet of paper, I had to lift the cat to get it."

You say this and all around the room people look at each other: "Did we get in the wrong classroom? I thought this was about journalism. Not about cats."

I don't know why the cat and I had such a literary rapport. I've never been able to recapture it with any other cat. With any other kitchen table. There was some magic there among the pots and pans.

Thus we go through our educated lives. Able to successfully split the infinitive, but unable to take a half dozen pears and apples apart with calipers, a butcher knife and a $39.95 calculator.

Nobody's perfect, said my sixth grade scholar. A wise guy for all seasons.

Midshipman Worried Nickname Might Stick

Norfolk, Va. AP — Kilton, a 20-year-old Naval Academy midshipman who escorted Susan Ford during her reign during the 23rd International Azalea Festival here last week, hopes the nickname given him by the President's daughter doesn't stick.

Kington expects to become a doctor, and how would it look on the shingle? Dr. Kilton. Kilton Kingsman

The two spent a considerable amount of time together during the festival, but Kingsman accidentally acquired the nickname Kilton on their last meeting.

My name is Kilton, but I guess she didn't hear it so she first called me K. K. I've never used it, except that everybody else did in judging the Secret Service people and festival officials.

$8,765 Shortage Found In Foundation Accounts

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Fairbury — An $8,765 shortage in the account of Colman Foundation, Inc. has been discovered through an involved civil action which has been before Jefferson County District Court for four years.
In a special order issued Tuesday, Judge William Rist directed the foundation's trustees to recover such funds, as may have been misappropriated or improperly expended by its longtime secretary-treasurer Robert Diller of Stock City. The former Chicago attorney now retired, resigned both as a trustee and secretary-treasurer last September.
The original case, filed by some 130 potential heirs of the foundation's founder, the late Andrew H. Colman of Fairbury, had asked for a dissolution and the division of some $700,000 in assets among them. The trustees then countered with a suit, later consolidated with the original, also seeking dissolution but asking that the assets be divided among four charitable organizations.

The shortage came to light at a hearing this week, one of several held since the original filing in April 1972, which was apart of an accounting also sought by the heirs. While the total amounted to $17,897, testimony indicated that all but $8,765 had already been made up by a relative of Diller.
The two trustees who had served with Diller, Max Logan of Diller and Mrs. Carolyn Meyer of Fairbury, testified they first learned of the shortage last May. Diller has since been replaced as trustee by Mrs. Margaret Ewers of Fairbury.
Court officials said testimony also indicated that Colman funds had been used for several interest-free loans, one as high as $44,000, over the past decade. But both Logan and Mrs. Meyer said they have no knowledge of the borrowers' identities.

A further ruling on the accounting is expected in about two months, along with a decision on whether to approve the trustees' proposed fund distribution. In a March 8 order, Judge Rist decreed that the money should properly be divided among charitable organizations rather than the heirs.
As requested by the trustees, 40% of the assets would go to the Nebraska Children's Home Societies of Omaha. The other beneficiaries, each to receive 20%, would be the Martin Luther Home of Beatrice, Epworth Village of York and Child Saving Institute of Omaha.

According to a March 31 audit by an Omaha firm, the assets now total $704,365. Several farms owned by the foundation were sold in 1973.
The foundation had been established in 1933 through the will of Colman, who died the year before. A Protestant Orphans Home was operated at Diller under the will's provisions until 1956. A lack of suitable boys was said to be a main reason for the home's closing.
Diller, who was a railroad corporate attorney in Chicago, retired to Steele City several years ago in an antique-filled mansion. According to a statement of assets filed with the court, the old home — located on two square blocks — is valued at $32,000 and the antiques at $15,000.
In poor health, Diller is under a guardianship and did not appear at the hearings.

California Cattleman To Speak

North Platte (UPI) — Bill Stanger of the California Cattlemen's Assn. will be among the speakers for the Nebraska Stock Growers Assn. meeting June 9-11.
Because California has both a large agricultural industry and a huge population, Stanger may provide some insight to the problems that lie ahead in resolving people-food-land use conflicts, said Mickey Stewart, association executive secretary.
Perhaps we can learn to protect our property rights in Nebraska better than they have been in California, Stewart added.
Other speakers scheduled for the convention at North Platte include Jim Stevenson, president of Atmospheric Specialties, Loveland, Colo., and Dick McDouglas and Tommy Beall of Cattle Fax.

Mrs. Fay Morton Vlasak of Crete was named special education teacher of the year. She has taught at the Chap School of Bellevue since 1968.

Because of their fund raising activities and social events, the Kearney State College Greek organizations were chosen as organizations of the year.

Special recognition was given to Mrs. Marge Reimer and Mrs. Sheila Smith, team teachers at Hastings Junior High School, for a mini course they designed on mental retardation.

Mrs. Emma Hunt received special memorial recognition for her dedication as special education teacher in the Clarkson Public Schools.

The president's award for leadership went to the Nebraska State Council of the Knights of Columbus for their statewide fund raiser, and Bruce Mason, attorney for the plaintiffs in the Beatrice State Home lawsuit.

In other business, NebARC set a $113,535 budget, 17% higher than last year's, calling for a new field office in western Nebraska.

Lincoln Man Arrested In Iowa On Rape Count

A Lincoln man wanted in connection with the rape of a 19-year-old woman on a county road near Roca early Monday morning has been arrested in Ottumwa, Iowa.

The Lancaster County sheriff's office said Robert Tiff, 35, will be returned to Lincoln on a warrant charging him with rape, auto theft and being a habitual criminal.

The woman told sheriff's deputies that she was raped by a man she met in an Emerald tavern Sunday night.

She said she and the man left the tavern in a car she had borrowed from a girlfriend. She said the man drove to a country road near Roca, stopped the car and raped her.

She said she escaped when the man drove into Roca after the rape and she jumped from the car and ran into a nearby house.

Doniphan Power Plant Motion Referred To Regional Planners

Hastings (AP) — The joint city councils of Hastings and Grand Island Tuesday night referred to the Hall County Regional Planning Commission a motion to place a proposed $80 million 150-megawatt power plant near Doniphan.

Several hundred residents of the small south central Nebraska village urged more study and consideration by the joint city council meeting.

The citizens complained that they had not been consulted about the proposed site until nine days before its adoption by the Great Plains Power Agency, the governing body of the proposed plant.

Twin Genets Born At Zoo

Two 2.5-ounce genets were born at the Children's Zoo Sunday night. Only 13 genets live in captivity in the world.

Genets are related to the mongoose, distantly related to cats. There were no recorded genet births in 1975.

The parents of the two baby genets came to the Children's Zoo in 1974.

Because the births are so rare, zoo staff are recording eating, sleeping and weight figures to submit to the International Zoological Yearbook of London.

Press Committee To Discuss Gags

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Newspaper Publishers' association announced Wednesday formation of a committee to meet with the bar on the issue of so-called gag orders on the press.

ANPA Chairman Harold W. Andersen of the Omaha World-Herald said Ashton Phelps, a lawyer who is president and publisher of Times-Picayune and States-Item in New Orleans, would head the panel. The other members have not been decided.

"We are not appointing a committee to negotiate away First Amendment rights," Andersen said later.

He said the committee's purpose was to talk, circumventing litigation as a means of accommodation between the press and the judiciary.

He said he was "hopeful" of the committee's chance of success.

Andersen commented at a panel on "Press-Bar Issues" held on the final day of the ANPA's three-day convention.

The panelists were Joe R. Seacrest, chairman of Journal-Star Printing Co., Lincoln, Neb.; Dale R. Spencer of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, and Hans Zeisel of the University of Chicago Law School.

Seacrest, whose newspaper is among those involved in the Erwin Charles Simants gag order case, questioned the court's need to "isolate, insulate and sterilize the public" to get an impartial jury.

"A prior restraint is nothing more than censorship by the government—here it's done by the judiciary rather than the executive branch," he remarked.

But, describing himself as a

Clean Air Regulation On Agenda 3rd Time

By United Press International

The Nebraska Environmental Control Council will take up for the third time May 14 an air pollution control regulation which the Nebraska Public Power District says spells a $54 million unnecessary expenditure for it.

The regulation at issue is commonly referred to as the "20-mile rule."

That rule prohibits, without installation of air pollution cleanup equipment, construction of two industrial plants within 20 miles of each other if pollutants reach a certain ground buildup level.

NPPD has been considering and last week made it official that it wants to build a second coal-fired electrical generation unit at Sutherland. The district said the pollution control equipment required now would cost $54 million. NPPD originally sought total repeal, rather than replacement of the 20-mile rule.

The State Environmental Control Department once considered simply doubling the ground buildup level. That was rejected and the department next recommended a change in the regulation which would peg the need for pollution control equipment to plant smokestack emissions rather than ground level buildup.

The 20-mile reference would be removed.

The council last month fell one vote short of adopting that proposal and this month, following a council committee study, will again consider essentially the same regulation.

Richard Hanson, environmental department attorney, said he felt the new proposal would give NPPD the "elbow room" it wanted.

"They're looking at it," said Gene Robinson, head of the department's air pollution control division. He said NPPD officials have indicated they would not be at the May 14 council meeting to oppose the regulation.

In drafting the proposed new regulation, NPPD wanted the department to simply disregard the fact that Gerald Gentleman Station Unit One is now being built so that air cleansing equipment wouldn't have to be installed on the second coal unit.

"They tell me they think they might be able to meet the standards" contained in the proposal, even though Unit One would be counted, Robinson said.

He said whether that is true or not will be made clear once NPPD files its formal application for a second unit at Sutherland. In filing the application, statistical information will be filed which the department and NPPD can use in determining whether the second unit would in fact need equipment called "scrubbers."

Liquor Control Board Cancels Agent Transfer

By United Press International

The Nebraska Liquor Control Commission has decided against transferring one of its Omaha agents to McCook.

Roger Irwin, an Omaha liquor agent since 1971, was granted a grievance on the basis that the McCook transfer would have caused a hardship on Irwin's family, said Roger Schultz, executive secretary of the Nebraska Association of Public Employees.

Just prior, Irwin testified in behalf of former commission chief agent Norman Rollins, who had been dismissed by the three-member commission. Rollins was unsuccessful in attempts to have state personnel officials reinstate him, subsequently suing the commission in Lancaster County District Court where the case is pending.

Irwin had declined to comment on whether he believed his testimony for Rollins had any bearing on the proposed McCook transfer.

Boys Town Alum Sues For Royalties

Omaha (AP) — A $500,000 lawsuit has been filed in California against Boys Town by one of the home's alumni.

The suit, filed by Robert Paradise of Granada Hills, Calif., contends that Boys Town officials promised him 5% of proceeds from sales of "Boys Town Sings America," a record made by the Boys Town choir.

The Rev. Robert Hupp, Boys Town director, has denied all the allegations in the suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles in February.

Paradise was born in Valentine, Neb., and attended Boys Town from 1932 to 1937.

Paradise contends the idea of a Bicentennial record by the Boys Town choir was his and was first mentioned to Boys Town officials in February 1975, at a Boys Town reunion in Omaha.

He said during several later conversations with Father Hupp he was orally promised the 5% commission on all record sales.

Boys Town announced in January that it would distribute the record through Capitol Records of Hollywood and Sound Recorders of Omaha.

Father Hupp said no agreement was made, orally or written, for a percentage of the record sales to go to Paradise.

Apartment Opposition Mounting

Opposition is building against construction of a nine-story apartment building for the elderly near the State Capitol.

The newly-formed Capitol Environs Committee says height of the apartment building will detract from the Capitol Building.

State Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln, a committee member, said construction of the 105-unit building is not too far along for the committee to oppose it, if such action is decided on.

The building is being constructed for the Lincoln Housing Authority.

Water Projects Please Burbach

Hartington (UPI) — Unicameral Speaker Jules Burbach of Hartington said Wednesday he was pleased with Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe's announcement of two new projects in Nebraska.

Kleppe, in Lincoln Tuesday to address Nebraska's bankers, said feasibility studies would be started into using Lewis and Clark Lake water for irrigation and the Little Blue would be studied for reclamation project purposes.

"That's wonderful," Burbach told UPI, referring specifically to Lewis and Clark. "I'm very, very happy to see this progress."

Burbach said he and others began 20 years ago trying to convince state and federal officials the Missouri River could be used for irrigation purposes.

"I'm 100% for it all the way down to Omaha," he said.

However, the senator said there may have been some misunderstanding concerning some reports of Kleppe's comments. Burbach said he had heard initially Kleppe was talking of diverting water from the Missouri River Basin to other river basins.

"I have talked to several state and federal officials and this is not the case," the senator said.

He also said that he is not necessarily opposed to water diversion, a concept some have mentioned as a way of bringing water short areas up in water levels.

"I am not opposed to diversion as long as it can be proved there is a surplus of more than 30 years' duration," Burbach said. "Under those circumstances, I have no objection to doing what we can to keep water in Nebraska."

The senator said his first point of federal contact on the Missouri irrigation idea was with one of Kleppe's predecessors, the late Fred Seaton.

The idea didn't fare well then, Burbach said, because the state was not divided into river basins as it is now; there were no natural resource districts to help work out financial arrangements, and the state simply did not have a state water plan.

"We have all these things now and we're ready to start on this thing," he said.

Man Sought In Shooting Thought On Reservation

Gordon (UPI) — The Sheridan County attorney said Wednesday a suspect in a shooting at Gordon early Tuesday, Robert Roy Yellow Bird, is believed to be on the Pine Ridge Reservation.

Dennis King said Yellow Bird's wife, JoAnn, was stopped by authorities at Martin, S.D., Tuesday. She was released and has since returned to the couple's Gordon home.

An arrest warrant has been issued by the Sheridan County Court charging Yellow Bird, also known as Robert Roy Steele, with shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim. The U.S. attorney's office in Omaha also issued a warrant charging him with unlawful flight.

King also released the names of the two victims in the incident.

Dave Gardner was shot in the stomach and chest and Ronald Zywiec was shot in the hip and arm. Both were listed Wednesday in serious condition at the Gordon hospital. Gardner was initially listed in critical condition.

Both are from Gordon.

The shooting occurred in the parking lot of the Hacienda Motel, which has both a bar and restaurant. King declined to give a reason saying he would offer no explanation until a trial is held.

The physicians honored for their half century of service are: Drs. Donald W. Kingsley, Hastings; Siegfried H. Brauer and Charles P. Waite, Norfolk; Nancy Catania, Esley; J. Kirk, William F. ## Ed Group Seeks Political Clout

By The Associated Press

Ross Rasmussen, executive director of the Nebraska State School Boards Association, said Wednesday that a major effort would be launched to gain grass roots support and political clout for elementary and secondary education.

Rasmussen said a three-year campaign would be launched to make community leaders and others across the state aware of the problems in education. "We can't cry over our own cups of coffee in our own ranks," Rasmussen said.

He noted that the Legislature has not increased state aid to education from its $55 million level since 1972.

Rasmussen said his organization would take an active interest in the 24 legislative races this year. He said his organization would not make campaign contributions, but would interview the candidates on education issues.

During the last session, the Unicameral failed to override Gov. J. J. Exon's veto of a $15 million increase in state aid. Rasmussen said he was particularly distressed because some of those voting to sustain the veto did so to enhance their reelection prospects.

Rasmussen said he thought that showed evidence of a lack of public support for elementary and high school education.

"We simply have to reverse this trend," he said. "We are going to take it darn serious."

He blamed the lack of public support on programs which saddle schools with noneducation activities such as desegregation.

Rasmussen said the drive was being launched in connection with the Thursday meeting of the board of directors of the State School Boards Association.

Tornado Damage In Omaha 85% Repaired

Omaha (AP) — The "vitality and will" of residents has resulted in 85% renovation of a tornado-torn section in one year, according to Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky.

Final damage figures stand close to $130 million following the May 6, 1975, tornado which killed three persons and destroyed or heavily damaged 570 living units, 55 commercial units, two schools and one hospital. The tornado was round two in the battle of the elements for the Charles Geisler family. The Geislers lost another house in 1964 when the Papio Creek flooded.

"There's a little adversity in life. You do what you can to come back," said Geisler, who designed the home destroyed by the tornado.

A bomb shelter provided protection for the rest of the family while Geisler was away.

House Family's Roots

They moved into their newest home in November. "This is our roots. Our kids go to school here. We put an awful lot into the place and there are a lot of good memories," Geisler said.

The disasters have taught the Geislers to "get along with a lot less. It kind of pulls the family together," he said.

Recovery is still down the road for Rose Marie Jackson, who suffered a broken back, crushed ribs and massive wounds when the tornado knocked down a wall of the West Omaha Postal Station. After the accident, she said, "I've thought about it and think it is better I was injured than some others — you know, the ones with children."

Still In Body Cast

Mrs. Jackson remains in a body cast following surgery to fuse her spine.

The number of rebuilt structures was not available. However, both Jim Kelly of the city planning department and Keith Carter, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, said a majority of the homes and businesses have been replaced.

New Wing Planned

Total damage was estimated at over $3 million, she said. Groundbreaking will be Friday for a new wing to replace damaged emergency, intensive care and coronary care units.

Although 900 persons were in the hospital during the disaster, there were only a "few scratches" as staff members pushed patients to safety and handed babies down an "assembly line of life," Sister Patricia Clair said.

Henry Molter of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration at Kansas City said his agency provided $3,697,521 in disaster relief funds.

"If you wrote a scenario for a disaster and everybody studied their lines, the recovery effort could not have been much better," said Francis X. Tobin, the agency's regional director.

2,800 Families Helped

Tobin said the agency was able to provide aid for over 2,800 families in eight days because of good post-tornado weather, news media cooperation, work by Zorinsky, and help from federal, state and local governments.

Carter added that there are a "small percentage of vacant lots where businesses once stood."

The Nebraska Furniture Mart West, which received an estimated $500,000 damage, reopened in the same location Saturday. Insurance covered the cost of rebuilding.

The Small Business Administration has provided about $3 million in loans to businesses struck by the tornado, according to city planners.

Omaha Site For Testing Flu Vaccine

Omaha (AP) — Omaha has been selected as one of the sites where the new swine flu vaccine will be tested before a nationwide vaccination program is implemented.

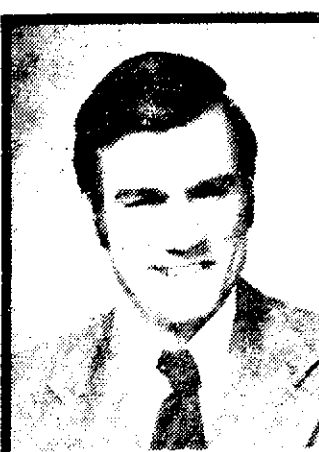

Dr. Stephen Lerman, director of the pediatric infectious disease unit at the University of Nebraska Medical Center, said 250 youngsters from the Omaha area will receive the vaccine.

Local volunteers will be recruited from families of Medical Center employees and students, according to Lerman. Participants will range from six months to 11 years of age.

The testing will start May 12, and should be completed by mid-June.

Jones To Costar

Hollywood (UPI) — Carolyn Jones returns to films after a six-year absence to costar with Stuart Whitman and Mel Ferrer in "Death Trap."

Last year Nebraskans enjoyed the distinction of being last (50th) in the nation in terms of economic gain but have not been immune from higher cost and taxation. Despite numerous gubernatorial vetoes, the last legislature appropriated $986.7 million ... $450.9 million from the state tax supported General Fund. STOP and THINK, nine years ago the amount was only around 100 million. If you don't vote you shouldn't gripe ... BUT WE CAN SLOW DOWN THE INCREASE BY HAVING LESS GOVERNMENT AND FEWER COSTLY BILLS.

Modern Office Equipment Due

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

County office personnel from Farmers Home Administration offices across Nebraska were told Wednesday by their national administrator, Frank B. Elliott, they will be getting better office equipment.

The annual state FHA convention and training meeting opened at the Hilton Hotel in Lincoln Wednesday and will continue through Friday.

Elliott said he had seen typewriters "that must be the very first model ever produced" in many county offices.

"We don't want you using a stubby pencil to figure up the farm and home loans. You should be getting electronic computers and new copying machines if you don't already have them," he promised.

Elliott added that he hoped to be able to equip most county offices with a computer hookup that would greatly speed the processing of loan applications.

"In the eight county offices where we now have the computer terminals, we have the checks for loans out in as little as four days," he said.

Elliott praised the county personnel for their dedication and service.

"You are providing 70% of all the farm credit today. There is very little lost money, less than 0.17% on farm land loans, a record few banks can match, and you are lending money to people who can't get credit anywhere else," he said.

Elliott told the county FHA office staffs he wanted the new equipment in their offices so they could spend more time working on making loans and less time shuffling paperwork.

"When we started 40 years ago we made only farm loans. Today we are making housing loans in rural communities, water loans, sewer loans, even industrial loans under rural development programs. We have to use modern technology to handle the case load," he said.

Union Election Nullified

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster County welfare workers no longer have a union local under a ruling Wednesday by the Nebraska Supreme Court.

The court said that Lancaster County is not the sole employer of the welfare workers and that it would be absurd to force the county to negotiate with Local 2802 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME).

The court pointed out that state government closely controls welfare workers and pays 96% of their salaries. Therefore, the court said both state and county governments should be involved in negotiation with welfare workers.

In making its ruling the court threw out the September 1973 election in which Lancaster County welfare workers voted 65 to 57 to unionize.

Debra Swearingen of the Lancaster County welfare Office, a union member, said she was very disappointed by the ruling and that union members are unsure of their next step.

She said welfare workers intend to seek legal advice on whether another election should be sought.

Jerry Lemonds, director of the welfare office, said he was happy with the ruling because he anticipated that any agreement reached locally would be overruled by state officials.

Lemonds noted that the ruling also affects Douglas County where welfare workers had also voted to join AFSCME.

In other rulings the court —upheld a Gage County District Court ruling transferring 200 acres from the District of School District to the Odell School District on the grounds that it was to the educational benefit of the six children living on the land.

—reversed and entered a new trial in a damage suit filed by Raymond Grotelke against Steve Stubbs, Dodge County District Court.

—reversed and remanded to the Colfax County District Court for further proceedings a $19,850 award to Virginia Plouffe, Fred A. Association, in a suit against Spencer Foods Inc.

—affirmed in part a Madison County District Court ruling transferring a suite bought by J. Paul McIntosh against Otto Bollers.

—agreed with the terms of a divorce decree issued by the Douglas County District Court to John and James Abbott.

—affirmed a warranty dispute filed by Cops Construction Co. against the City National Bank of Crete in the Southern District Court.

—affirmed a Douglas County District Court judgment of $29,512 in favor of Crane Co. in a business dispute with Robert's Supply Co.

—agreed with the terms of a divorce decree issued by the Douglas County District Court to Robert and Pauline Band.

High Court Junks One Of Nebraska's Most-Used Drug Laws

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

One of the state's most-used drug laws, frequently invoked in marijuana cases, was tossed on the junkheap of defective legislation Wednesday by the State Supreme Court.

The law, under which hundreds of convictions have been won since it was passed in 1971, made it a crime for anyone to be in the same building or car with a person using or possessing drugs.

Critics had long suggested that under the law police could have made giant busts of 5,000 or more in one swoop at rock concerts, where a few individuals often smoke marijuana.

The court, with one dissent, struck down the law on the grounds that it was overbroad and vague that it was unconstitutional.

Lancaster County Attorney Ron Lahners said that his office was getting more than 100 convictions a year under the law, equal in number to the convictions for actual possession.

He said his office often prosecuted under the law when police made arrests at "reel parties."

"Often they'll only be smoking one or two at a time and passing them around when we come in," Lahners said. "It's hard to prove that the people who weren't holding the marijuana at the time were also in possession."

But the law under which those cases were prosecuted is so broad that it also encompasses "entirely innocent behavior," said the majority opinion by Judge Donald Brodecky.

The Judge posed a series of rhetorical questions to illuminate the quandry in which the law placed citizens.

"Must a host expel his guest if he discovers the guest is in possession of or using a controlled substance?"

"What action would a passenger in a car take when he learns that others in the car have drugs on their persons although they are not at that time using the drugs?"

"How about the status of relatives, priests or doctors attempting to discourage continued violations?"

"What if a person were engaged in a constitutionally protected activity, such as attending a public meeting or voting, when he inadvertently discovers that another person at the meeting or at the polls is in possession of a controlled substance?"

The Supreme Court believes, Brodecky wrote, that "the dividing line between what is lawful and unlawful cannot be left to conjecture."

Any law which has such vague terms that men of "common intelligence" have to guess at its meaning violates a person's constitutional right to due process of law," the court said.

The single dissenting judge, Harry Spencer, said he feels the court should have held the law constitutional because similar laws in California, Massachusetts and Florida have been upheld.

To that opinion Judge Lawrence Clinton responded bluntly that the courts in those states were simply rewriting the law under the guise of making a judicial interpretation of its meaning.

"If we are to do that then we violate the principles of separation of powers of our own Constitution by a completely unwarranted intrusion into the legislative domain."

The State Supreme Court ruling upheld earlier rulings by the Platte County District Court in the dismissal of charges against James E. Adkins and Daniel J. Sutherland, who were riding in a 1968 Chevrolet when they were arrested by Platte County authorities.

Class Offered Broad View Of Energy Crisis

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Surrounded by the finite, by predictability and precision, the engineer sometimes does not see the overview, the intertwining of technology and human behavior.

But this past semester, 15 electrical engineering students and one broadcast journalism major looked into the overlapping and sometimes conflicting areas of energy, ecology and conservation.

And by their own admission many of the students came out of the class with a "broadened view" of energy alternatives.

The idea for the class began over a cup of coffee last fall, when two University of Nebraska-Lincoln electrical engineering professors, Dr. Edwin Lowenberg and Byron Dean, found they had a mutual interest and concern with the energy problem.

Believing there is a growing energy problem, the two decided to co-instruct a class where prospective engineers and students from other disciplines would explore together the social, environmental and technical aspects of energy.

Problem Not Solved

"Just because there is no line at the gas station does not mean that the energy problems are solved," Lowenberg said.

The gap is widening between energy production and energy consumption. "We're on a collision course," Lowenberg believes.

Rather than lecture about their own ideas, the two professors brought in experts from many fields, including nuclear power, wind power and trash-burning plants.

Students Do Reports

At the end of the semester each student selected one topic for oral and written reports. And as the semester progressed students began to rethink their original assumptions.

"I didn't see cause and effect. I hadn't weighed the alternatives," said David Griffith, 25, a senior electrical engineering student.

His final report suggested that a major social overhaul will be necessary in order to keep energy demands within the world's ability to supply those demands.

The only non-engineering student Ken Mohr, looked into the total energy picture for his report and concluded that the energy crisis can be solved, but only by combining technology and conservation efforts.

Natural gas will be depleted by about 1980, oil by 2000 and coal sometime around 2150, ac-ording to statistics compiled by Mohr.

Not Fossil Fuels

Therefore, the world cannot rely on fossil fuels for future energy needs, Mohr believes.

Though class participation has convinced Mohr that nuclear plants are safe, he does not think nuclear energy is the total solution.

Instead, scientists must develop solar technology, Mohr said.

The sun shines down about 30,000 times the world's energy needs every day, according to 1970 statistics.

Can Be Converted

And this can be converted to usable energy through solar wind, tidal, geothermal means plus recycling of human wastes and garbage, he said.

But technology must be coupled with a strong national energy policy stressing population control, conservation and intelligent spending, he believes.

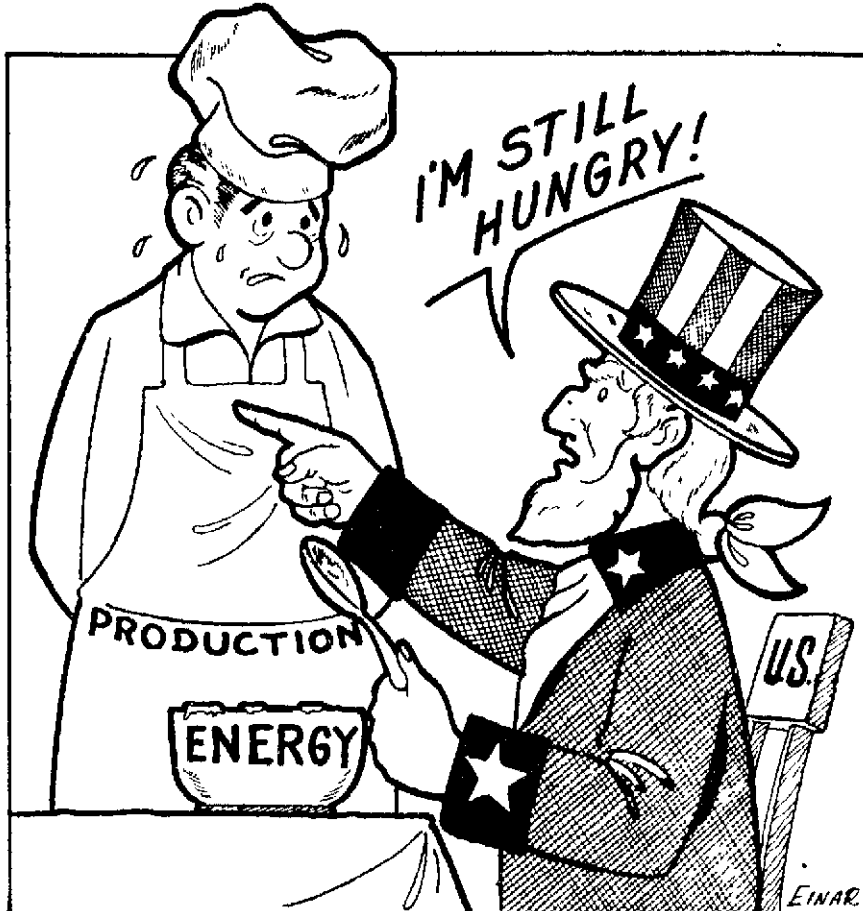

If the rest of the world refuses to go along with these conservation policies, the United States is going to have to be energy independent, said Mohr.

What Mohr outlined in his report is what Lowenberg stressed during a private interview — "compromise solutions all the way down the line."

"People have to believe in Santa Claus to believe that scientists alone will be able to solve the growing energy shortage," the two men believe.

Deadening Anesthetic Fear Lacks Any Real Value

By JAMES S. AULD

There are many different kinds and types of fears but watching animals we find there are basically only two ways of responding to fear with of course variations and combinations of the two. One basic way is by the cessation of all motion while the other is exactly the opposite. Instinct and past and familiar behavior patterns are tried and the familiar expression of paralyzed with truth is equally applicable in either instance.

Basic similarity between the fears of humans and other species of comparable higher level of aliveness and those of lower animals is evident. Some seem to feel that the way to go about getting people to cooperate is to kick the self-concept out of them if they don't. The absurdity of a wife who wants her husband to ride along on the bus she is sponsoring to the out-of-town game indicating the alternative of cooperating or putting him on the list for a week of artificially produced crap by her friends who are more than willing to cooperate if she will only do the same when their husbands get out of line if not for any number of other reasons is apparent. The wife is very proud of this achievement since the husband wouldn't have cooperated otherwise. And there are those who will reinforce the sham by stating something to the effect of my what a nice cooperating husband you have but the destruction of functional reality because of inhibitions, pseudism and lack of good reality is deadening.

Another theory is to create guilt so that a person will be willing to do anything to make up for his sins. Guilt often does make for hyperactivity but is the opposite of educational reality. It is extremely hard to be objective while feeling guilty not only because of the personal threat involved but also because if you are still feeling guilty about something that you are actually responsible for doing you probably still don't have a complete understanding of the mechanics involved so that you don't have enough information to objectively analyze the concern. To exploit nurture and artificially develop and promote guilt is not only an ultimate sin but, indeed, criminal.

write on

There are even those who feel that the way to get people to work together is by running the truck for example that a group of people are riding it into the ditch and especially if it is getting along toward dinner time and they are hungry and if they are on their way to a bomb shelter for protection from the pending disaster, so that they will all get out and push and thus be working together. People like to help each other and work together if given positive opportunities to do so and if they haven't been taught not to but those who will only work out of fear are going to discontinue working when the fear has dissipated unless those factors that were keeping them from working have also vanished.

One of my 'guests' had gone through the whole brutal training process and knew what fear was from top to bottom. She had been stomped on, robotized, brutalized and if massive doses of fear and brutality were ever going to work this should have been the case. But when she thought a pending disaster was assured and that reality would be liquidated in the process she exuberantly proclaimed 'I don't care what you do' while fleeing in the other direction after just previously wailing prolongingly through a flood of tears supposedly out of concern. She had learned that in a dog eat dog world one takes care of herself by exploiting everything in sight. Her life was devoid of meaning except to escape punishment and to try to regain some of what had been stripped from her. What a sadistic, satirical mockery of the word decency!

Fear paralyzes and unpeaks — fear does not build. Those that live in fear are afraid to consider and try concepts that are different from the tried and true methods they have survived with in the past. Fear is a weapon with no value in the development of educational responsibility.

Retirement Doldrums Captured

On the verandas of St. Petersburg, Fla., life is paced to the gentle swaying of rocking chairs as elderly pensioners sit and wait and wait and wait.

Finnish author Toiv. Jansson has picked up the subtle rhythms of this retirement existence in her new book, Sun City (Pantheon).

Following closely the publication of The Summer Book — in which Ms. Jansson explored the joys that can attend the aging process — Sun City presents another view of people waiting out their final years.

It is a fictionalized account. Yet it contains more than a whisper of truth.

There are more hard-core seniors in St. Petersburg than anywhere else in the country, and they are specialists at creating any little puffs of thin white hair — she writes at the outset.

In the perpetually hushed atmosphere of retirement homes, "No one is sick that is not in the normal sense of sick in bed. Such matters are attended to in credibly swift by ambulances that never sound their sirens."

The eerie setting is populated by people who no longer fit into the mainstream of American life.

Individuals all the residents of the fictional Berkeley Arms retirement home seem nothing more to the outside observer than a faceless mass of humanity defined in terms of age.

But Ms. Jansson takes us inside their lives. Defining the separate characters, their petty spats, their quirks, their closely circumscribed lives.

And it is to her credit that her insights steer clear of sloppy sentimentality. These are real people she grings to life, no less real than those who live beyond the sunlit streets of St. Petersburg.

It is just that life has left them with different concerns, different fears than those borne by their younger contemporaries.

With nothing much left to her, Mrs. Elizabeth Morris, 77, has time to notice that "the room you leave open behind you can be full of pitiful carelessness."

You have to hide away the signs and apertures of old age, small, unesthetic oversights, all the supporting constructions of helplessness, so unnoticed and so obvious.

An eccentric old woman? Perhaps. But really no more so than anyone else. Circumstances have a way of dictating behavior. And if these characters are to be pitied it is not for themselves, but for their environment.

There is in many of the characters created by Ms. Jansson for this book a certain honesty about life and death.

The death of an elderly man during the Senior Club's Spring Ball prompts Alexander Thompson, an acerbic man of 80, to comment: "My friend Jeremiah Spennert used to say, 'So what?' It's not worth brooding about. They're finished — and maybe they've learned something."

Real people. Cast aside by the circumstance of old age. Yet still alive.

Sometimes I toy with the idea of writing you an amusing description of the old people awaiting their final departure on the sunlit veranda of the Berkeley Arms, writes Rebecca Rubinstein to her son. But I tell myself that you can probably observe the same display of human passions, misconceptions, and lack of direction in your own surroundings.

Woman And 5 Children Who Can't Find House Live In Tent

Haddam, Conn. (UPI) — Marvann Wolf and her five youngsters and one cat are living in a tent in the forest. She says her family is so large no one will rent an apartment to them.

The Wolfs live in the Cockaponset State Forest but a two-week limit on camping means the family must dismantle its 9-by-12 foot tent within a week, Mrs. Wolf said.

She said it sometimes seems easier living outdoors in the chilly spring weather than explaining to the children that they cannot find a home.

It's hard, especially with Steven, the oldest one (7), to explain why people don't want them to live with them. They're very observant," she said.

Mrs. Wolfe, 26, said her estranged husband, Ronald, is staying with the family temporarily because she and the children are afraid at night.

Ronald, a jobless construction worker, collects $130 weekly unemployment compensation which he shares with the family, she said.

Mrs. Wolf said she is ineligible for state welfare benefits because the family lacks a permanent address.

District State Welfare Director Gerald Kupper said no one is denied help because they lack a permanent address but that the department prefers not to mail checks to a post office address.

Before moving into the forest, Mrs. Wolfe and the children lived with her mother in Hadlyme, but a family disagreement resulted in their making a home in the forest, she said.

The family cooks outside, takes sponge baths and hangs laundry on trees.

Salvation Army officials say they are hopeful temporary housing can be found for the family and that the town has kicked in a $30 aid but future town help is doubtful.

Mother Steps In To Write Thanks

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I received the following letter in the mail:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. X: Five months is long enough for anyone to wait for an acknowledgement of a wedding gift. In spite of my continual urging, my daughter, who incidentally was taught better, has not gotten around to writing her thank-you notes, so please try to forgive her laziness and accept my thanks for the lovely wedding gift you sent. Sincerely yours,

MRS. BLANK

Well, Abby. What do you think of the above?

Sign me...

FLABBERGASTED

DEAR FLABBER: I think it's evidence that there is at least one mother who finally backed up her bark with a bite.

DEAR ABBY: When a boy asks a girl to the senior prom, how long should he be kept waiting for her answer?

Our son asked a girl, and so far she has kept him dangling for five days. I think she is keeping him dangling until she gets a better offer, and if she doesn't get any, she'll accept.

So, Abby, how long should he dangle?

TONY'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: After dangling for five days, Tony should consider himself cut down and free to ask another girl.

DEAR ABBY: I have a backyard neighbor who has been watching me for the last two years. I thought perhaps he wanted to be friendly, but when I see him on the street, he turns his head.

He has a 9 to 5 job and is home on weekends. Every time I look out of my back window I see him in his backyard, staring at my back door, waiting for me to appear.

He has driven past my home several times, slowing up to look. Even the neighbors have mentioned it.

He is married, but I seldom see his wife. We have never spoken to each other, either, but I'm sure she knows that I am her neighbor. My husband and I don't want to cause any trouble as we plan on living in this neighborhood for a long time.

but this man gives me the creeps.

Do you think I should go to the police? He really hasn't done anything except stare at my back door and drive around my house.

Should I initiate a conversation with this man or perhaps talk to his wife? Please help me.

FRIGHTENED

DEAR FRIGHTENED: You may be unjustifiably suspicious, or you may have a point. While with your husband, initiate a friendly conversation with this neighbor. His reaction should tell you something.

Opening lead - king of clubs.

It seems impossible to make six spades on this deal — due to the 4-1 trump division — but when the hand was played South managed to perform the task.

He won the club lead with the ace and ruffed a club at trick two. Standing by itself, the ruff appears to be a pointless play, as it seems more natural to start drawing trumps at once after winning the club lead.

But the actual declarer was a farsighted player who realized that no harm at all could come from ruffing a club at trick two, and that a lot of good might come from it.

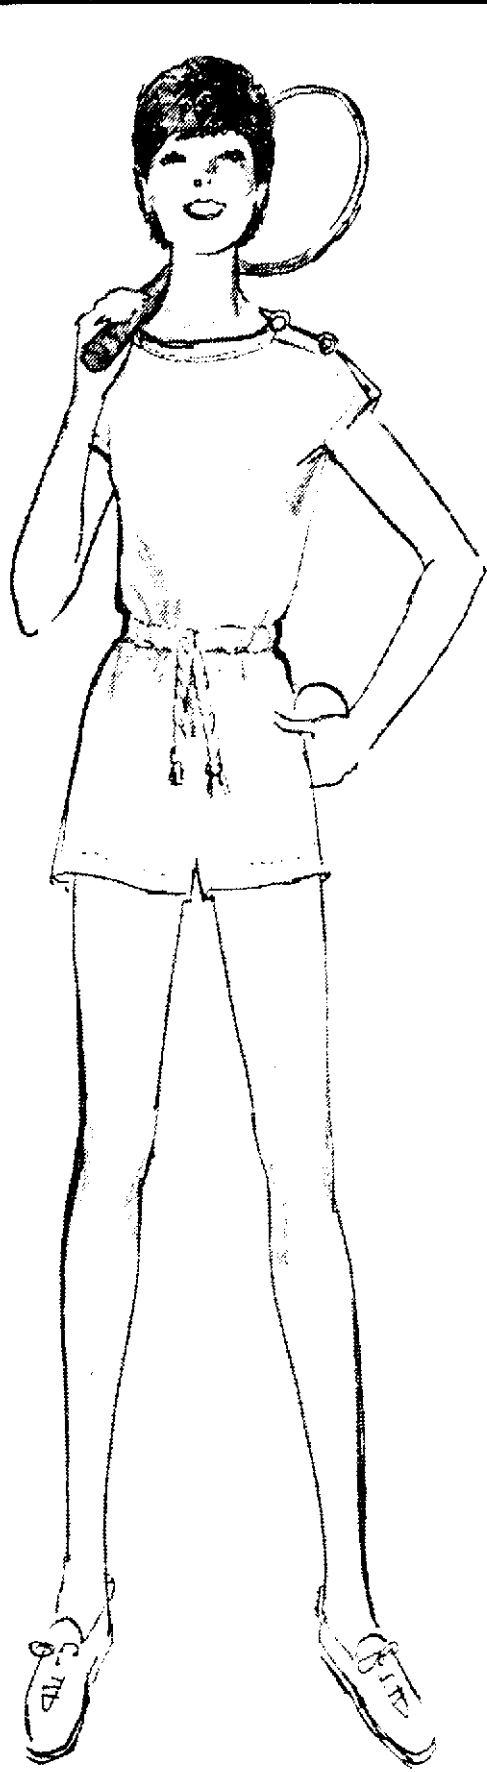

His foresight was exceptionally well rewarded when he next played the A-K of spades and learned that West had a sure trump trick coming. Undaunted, declarer continued with the queen of spades, played a heart to the ace, and ruffed another club with his last trump.

South then started to run his hearts and it made no difference whether or not West ruffed. If he ruffed, he would be forced to return a diamond away from the K-J. And if West chose not to ruff any of the heart leads, South would make the slam by simply cashing the first twelve tricks.

The outcome would have been altogether different had South neglected to ruff a club at trick two. If he had led trumps at once, West would have been able to ruff a heart later on in the play, exit with a club, and eventually score a diamond trick to put the contract down one.

The club ruff at trick two was indeed a farsighted play.

More Women Choosing Traditional Male Fields

Los Angeles (AP) — More women and fewer men are choosing careers in the traditionally male-dominated fields of law, medicine, business and engineering, a national survey indicates.

The study conducted by the American Council of Education and the University of California here showed that the percentage of female first-year college students planning careers in the four fields rose from 5.9% nine years ago to 16.9% this year. The percentage of the male freshmen planning careers in those fields fell from 48.9% to 39.4%.

The study also said that education has lost favor among college freshmen, with fewer men and women planning to become teachers than before.

Business is becoming very popular with women, said UCLA Prof. Alexander W. Astin, the study's author.

Astin said more women might be choosing business careers because "there are not as many educational prerequisites for business as there are for medicine, law or engineering."

Astin said female interest in male-dominated fields has been sparked by the women's movement, which he said "convinced a lot of high school girls that they can pursue these occupations and be treated on an equitable basis with men."

Other findings in the survey, which was based on questionnaires completed by 186,406 first-year students at 306 institutions, include:

—High school grades of entering students failed to increase for the first time in several years. The percentage of freshmen with a "B" average in high school, which had grown from 51.8% in 1969 to 63.9% in 1974, fell slightly to 63.6% in 1975.

—The percentage of entering students identifying themselves as politically middle of the road dropped to 53.8% in 1975, down from a high of 55.4% in 1974.

—The percentage of black freshmen increased to 9% last fall, up from 7.6% in 1974.

There's A New Whooper On Earth

Laurel, Md. (UPI) — A scraggly-looking whooping crane chick, hatched Wednesday at the government wildlife center here, greeted the world with "little peeps" and tried to walk around on its wobbly black legs.

"We've got a new whooper in the world," said a happy Dr. Cameron Kepler, who heads the program at Patuxent Wildlife Research Center to save the endangered species.

The male chick expands the whoopers' world population to 85, Kepler said. If the chick survives, he will be the first whooper successfully hatched and grown from parents raised in captivity.

A crane which hatched at the center last year died after 17 days because of a congenital deformity.

Kepler stayed up until 3:30 Wednesday morning, waiting for the chick to hatch after it pecked an irregular crack in its shell. But the bird wasn't cooperative and did not set foot outside the egg until 4½ hours later.

"He looks fairly healthy," said Kepler. "I don't think he looks in top shape. His down is a little matted, covered with membrane. Usually they fluff up right away."

3 Hughes Cousins Ask Postponement

Las Vegas, Nev. (UPI) — A Tennessee attorney representing three Howard Hughes cousins said Wednesday the purported Hughes will found under mysterious circumstances last week is "not valid and positively a forgery."

Alex Meacham filed a petition asking the Clark County Court to delay a May 21 probate hearing to give investigators more time to prove the document is a fake.

District Judge Keith Hayes is to be asked at that time to decide whether former Hughes aide Noah Dietrich should be appointed executor of the $2 billion estate and to determine whether the will is valid.

In another Hughes development, an official of the late billionaire's Summa Corp. said there are no plans to sell off the seven gambling casinos or other Nevada property held by Hughes.

"We think additional time in the probate matter should be granted to allow us to gather necessary information and facts to prove the will is not valid and positively a forgery," Meacham said.

Meacham represents three paternal cousins of Hughes — Jeff Melton Hughes, Elizabeth Hughes McDugald and Felix Turner Hughes. Meacham, of Smyrna, Tenn., filed a petition of interest on behalf of the same cousins in Los Angeles Tuesday.

Too Big A Matter

"This is too big of a matter to go forth on without proper time to prepare," Meacham told reporters.

"For example, Clifford Irving pulled a great hoax when he or someone forged a number of documents so well that top handwriting experts for McGraw-Hill thought they were authentic.

249 Rich Americans Paid No '74 Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A total of 244 Americans with adjusted gross incomes of $200,000 or more paid no income tax in 1974, the Internal Revenue Service said Wednesday, compared to 164 who paid no tax in 1973.

Five millionaires managed to avoid 1974 federal income tax payments also.

The IRS said that 31,132 persons reported incomes of at least $200,000 in 1974, and 1,128 persons reported adjusted gross incomes of more than $1 million, compared to 903 the previous year.

The statistics, contained in a preliminary IRS report on income tax returns for 1974, showed that the number of millionaires paying no tax slipped from seven in 1973 to five in 1974.

The IRS said all tax returns in the 200,000-plus range showing no tax liability will be reviewed to determine whether an audit is warranted.

It's likely that the number of wealthy Americans escaping taxes was even higher than indicated by the formal statistics. Adjusted gross income represents total income after subtraction of certain business expenses and special allowances.

An IRS spokesman noted, for example, that a person whose total income was attributable to tax-exempt municipal bonds wouldn't even have to report that income.

Psychologists Interviewing Patty Hearst

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Patricia Hearst, confined in the nation's most luxurious prison, has begun talking to psychologists, psychiatrists and counselors assigned to study the famous bank robber, her warden said Wednesday.

"The interviews and tests began this week," warden J. R. Williams said in a phone interview. But he said officials will be looking for more than a purely psychiatric evaluation of the 22-year-old heiress.

"She is not here on a psychiatric evaluation," he said. "She is here for study and observation . . . This involves different interviews and tests." Her schedule is designed to put her at ease, he said. "We don't call for six or eight hours of continuous interviews, because we don't want to antagonize anyone or get them frustrated. That's why they give us 90 days for such studies."

Miss Hearst's trial judge, U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter, said when he sent her to San Diego he would grant an extra three months if necessary to obtain a complete evaluation.

Miss Hearst, convicted in San Francisco on March 30, was given a temporary 35-year sentence that allowed her commitment for further study. Carter said he would await official reports before imposing a final sentence.

Russell's Son Booked On Murder Charge

Santa Maria, Calif. (UPI) — The 20-year-old adopted son of actress Jane Russell and football great Bob Waterfield was booked on a murder charge late Wednesday when the Mexican farm worker he was accused of shooting died at a hospital. Robert John Waterfield originally was charged with attempted murder of Oscar Hernandez, 26, of Maricopa, at a tavern Sunday. He was released from jail on $5,000 bail early Wednesday, but Hernandez died at Kern County Medical Center in Bakersfield later and the murder charge was filed.

Waterfield surrendered with his attorney, Martha Morgan.

Reagan Farm Campaign Lacking Police Statement

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Ronald Reagan is campaigning for the farm vote in rural Nebraska without a farm policy statement available for the press.

The only farm statement his staff was able to produce after two days of contacts was two taped excerpts from an Illinois speech.

The first dealt with the export ban on grains and soybeans imposed by the Ford and Nixon administration.

"The government asked farmers to farm fence row to fence row and then changed the rules of the game. They left farmers holding the bag full of wheat. It costs farmers $2.2 billion in lost sales," the Reagan taped statement said.

Reagan also expressed support for a $200,000 exemption on farm estate taxes. "The tax exemption of $50,000 was set many years ago and has not responded to many years of inflation," a staff man said.

The staff man didn't know if Gov. Reagan had a farm advisor on the staff but said "he will have one after he is nominated."

The staff also declined comment on whether Reagan would support a bill aimed at bonding packers and protecting cattle producers when packing companies go bankrupt.

"The governor would want to research that very carefully before he made a statement on that or on any other bill," the staff man said.

"We really haven't had the funds to provide for a farm staff or advisor. You may be able to get an answer from our national office, but you might not," the staff man said.

Button Biz Liked Upset

Chicago (UPI) — Prospects for a boom in the sagging campaign button business appeared a bit brighter Wednesday.

"An upset victory like Reagan's in Indiana figures to stir up more action from his supporters," said Frank J. Boston, president of Four Word Industries Corp. of west suburban Franklin Park.

Boston said he expects Reagan backers to come up with "more ballyhooing than they've had so far. They need the exposure."

By exposure, Boston means campaign buttons — walking billboards — and he admits they have not been too popular with candidates in this election year.

Number Of Nebraska Precincts Down 14

The number of Nebraska election precincts has declined by 14, from 2,073 in the general election two years ago to 2,059 in the primary Tuesday.

According to the latest reports to the secretary of state's office, Lancaster County precincts dropped from 202 to 199. In Omaha-dominated Douglas County, the number shrank from 399 to 379.

Schimek Would Sit In On Salary Talks

At least one member of the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College board should sit in on faculty negotiations about salaries and working conditions, according to DiAnna Schimek, candidate for the SeTech board.

Schimek said she thinks there needs to be

Increases in other counties offset the combined loss of 23 precincts in the two major urban centers.

Precinct changes may come about in three ways: Consolidation by county board district reapportionment; annexing, required by law, any precinct with fewer than 75 voters; or city annexation, creating a new ward or precinct.

Only 17 of Nebraska's 93 counties recorded changes, mostly owing to consolidation or annexing sparsely populated precincts.

Ten counties posted increases (1974 totals in parentheses): Box Butte — 11 (10); Boyd — 12 (9); Cherry — 21 (19); Dawes — 17 (16); Dundy — 8 (6); Hitchcock — 5 (4); Keith — 11 (10); Logan — 4 (3); Platte — 33 (30); Sarpy — 46 (43).

Seven counties showed declines. Aside from the leading Lincoln-Omaha area drops, Otoe County led the rural counties, falling from 25 to 20 precincts. Others reporting include Cheyenne — 14 (15); Gage — 37 (38); Perkins — 8 (9); Phelps — 18 (19).

Three counties — Arthur, Banner and Hooker — each remain organized as single precincts in sparsely populated western Nebraska.

Carter Man Says He May Not Make Meal

Omaha (AP) — Campaign officials for Democratic presidential front-runner Jimmy Carter contradicted Wednesday a statement that Carter will attend the annual Jefferson-Jackson dinner in Omaha Friday night.

Earlier in the day, State Democratic Chairman Dick White of Lincoln said Carter would appear at the dinner.

However, Paul Villar, Carter's campaign press coordinator said everything depends on timing.

The former Georgia governor is scheduled to attend a fundraiser in Detroit Friday evening, and is not expected to arrive in Omaha until late.

"Absolutely nothing, I repeat, absolutely nothing (in the way of public appearances), has been scheduled Friday night" in Omaha, Villar told the AP late Wednesday.

However, Villar said he hopes Carter will arrive in time to make an appearance at the dance slated to follow the dinner and that Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan has agreed to introduce Carter, should he make the dance.

Idaho Sen. Frank Church, who faces his first presidential primary test in Nebraska, is the only presidential candidate scheduled to speak at the dinner.

Meanwhile, Carter's youngest son, Jeff, 23, and his wife, Annette began a three-day swing in the state Wednesday.

The couple will tour through about 30 communities in the central and northeastern portions of the state.

Wednesday's stops included Grand Island, while Kearney, Loup City, Ord, O'Neill and Burwell were on Thursday's schedule.

Friday's stops include Albion, Columbus, then a return to Omaha where the couple will attend the Jefferson-Jackson dinner.

Underdog Sees Reunion

Washington (UPI) — Rep. Morris Udall, admitting he is an underdog for the Democratic presidential nomination, said Wednesday no matter who wins, the party will reunite and win in November.

President Ford is "the real enemy" of both him and Democratic frontrunner Jimmy Carter, Udall told a conference sponsored by the Graphic Arts International Union and the Newspaper Guild.

When the Democratic nominating process is over, Udall said, there will be "no blood on the floor" and the party will present a united front against the Republicans.

"We're not going to screw it up the way we did in '68 and '72," Udall said. "We're going to win one for a change."

Udall said of his own effort to win the nomination, "I know an underdog when I see one. The (Carter) bandwagon is rolling, the steamroller is on."

Natalie Lampung rides a horse engaged in an extended trot, one of the movements to be seen in this weekend's Cornhusker Dressage Classic.

Standouts Enter Dressage Classic

Internationally known equestrienne Natalie Lampung of Chicago, Ill. will be among the riders who will participate in the Cornhusker Dressage Classic at the State Fairgrounds Coliseum this weekend. According to show director Dick Noonan the two-day event which will begin Saturday is expected to draw about 250 entries. And it will include some Olympic level competition. Dressage is a method of training a horse to be balanced, supple and responsive to the rider's aids (hands, legs and weight). As the horse is trained, he progresses through a number of schooling levels that require increasingly difficult maneuvers. An exhibition of Grand Prix level dressage — the highest level used in international or Olympic competition — will be given by Lampung at 6:30 p.m. Saturday. Following the exhibition riders will compete in fourth and fifth St. Georges level rides — both of which are also used in Olympic competition. Noting that Lincoln residents seldom get to see dressage ridden at such high levels, Noonan said the horses and riders are brilliant and the uninitiated will easily appreciate what is taking place. Judging the show, which is sponsored by the Nebraska Dressage Association (NDA), will be Mrs. Robert T. Temple of Novato, Ohio, and Capt. Axle Steiner of the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. The rides are scheduled to begin each morning at 8 a.m., Noonan said. Horses and riders from a number of states will compete. A freestyle musical Kur — for which riders select their own music and choreograph their rides — will take place Sunday morning, Noonan said. And among the Sunday afternoon rides will be a Prix Caprioli which is a combination of dressage and jumping. Tickets for the Saturday evening events — the proceeds from which will go to the U.S. Olympic equestrian team — will be available at the coliseum door.

Westphal Sparkles In Phoenix Triumph

Oakland (UPI) — Guard Paul Westphal made 14 of 19 shots and scored 31 points to power the Phoenix Suns to a series squaring 108-101 victory over the Golden State Warriors in their NBA Western Conference Championship finals Wednesday night.

Westphal's torrid shooting plus 24 points from fellow guard Ricky Sobers, overcame a blistering 44-point outburst by Rick Barry, who connected on 17 of 31 shots and now has 82 points in the two games.

The best-of-seven series continues at Phoenix Friday and Sunday with the fifth scheduled for the Oakland arena Wednesday.

The loss snapped a three-game playoff win string for the Warriors who trailed most of the game while failing to contain the penetrating and shooting of the Phoenix backcourt duo.

Conversely, the Warriors' guards were subpar, leaving all the scoring pressure on Barry and Jamaal Wilkes, who scored 18 points.

The game was tied throughout the first half, Phoenix taking a 46-44 halftime lead. A 137 Golden State sport midway through the third quarter made it a 73-73 tie.

But Phoenix, behind Garfield Heard's four points, outscored the Warriors 8-0 at the end of the quarter to take an 81-73 lead into the final period.

The momentum continued and the Suns were seldom threatened in the late going despite 54 percent shooting by the aroused Warriors over the last 12 minutes.

Center Alvin Adams, who didn't play well in the series opener Sunday, was a factor for the Suns with a game-high nine assists.

A capacity crowd of 13,067 was loudly critical of the officiating as the Suns were not called for a foul in the final quarter until 2:57 remaining in the game.

A-1 Favorite Anyone's Guess

By CHUCK SINCLAIR Prep Sports Writer

It's unexplainable. That's what Lincoln East girls track coach Myron Oehlerking terms the title picture in Thursday's District A-1 girls meet at Stuart Stadium.

When looking for a favorite among the eight teams entered, Lincoln's five schools plus Norfolk, South Sioux City and Fremont, a guess will suffice.

But Oehlerking's Spartans may hold a slight edge considering a second place Trans Nebraska finish to defending state champion Grand Island two weeks ago and a more recent Eastern 1-80 Conference championship last week at Ralston.

But you must disregard the early season in making East the title choice.

The Spartans started out slow, finishing last in both the Lincoln Relays (tie with Northeast) and the Lincoln Public Schools meet.

Lincoln teams have taken turns at the top spot with Southeast winning the Relays and Lincoln High the city championship. By that standard, the district title should go to either Northeast or Plus X, both considered strong teams.

We're not planning on letting them have their turn, Oehlerking said. But you just don't know what's going to happen anymore. Northeast has some fine individuals who can score points for them in the big meets and make it awful tough to beat.

If there's anything that's going to give us a push, it's beating the other Lincoln schools by 20 points in the 1-80 meet at Ralston, he added. We picked up a few more first and second places in that meet.

In the Trans Nebraska meet, East earned just one first place, Joni Gray's high jump and no seconds.

We scored third and fourth places in all the other events though, Oehlerking said.

But it still seems impossible to score 70 points on just thirds and fourths. I guess it makes quite a bit of difference when you have the kind of depth we have. We've got so many different kids who can score points for us.

Oehlerking isn't shooting ultimately for a district title, just to advance as many girls as possible to the May 14-15 state meet in North Platte.

Preliminary events are scheduled for 3:15 p.m. on the track with the first field event finals, the shot put and high jump, slated to begin at 2:15 p.m.

Finals on the track start promptly at 6:30 p.m. with the last event scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Ask McGuire's Mom Who's Buffalo Coach

Chalk up an assistant to Al McGuire's mother. The Marquette basketball coach denied rumors Wednesday that his is a leading contender to succeed Jack Ramsay as coach of the NBA Buffalo Braves.

I haven't talked to anybody or been contacted by anybody. There's nothing to it. It's not true, McGuire said of the story broadcast on a Boston radio station. But McGuire did say he thought he knew where the rumor started.

My mother lives in Buffalo, you see, and every time something like this comes up, she leaks a story because she wants to see her son's name in the paper, he explained.

Faris And Finish Lines Make Great Friends

By CHUCK SINCLAIR Prep Sports Writer

Crete — Some people call it the girls state track and field championships.

Tecumseh sprint star Julie Farris refers to the May 14-15 event at North Platte as more of a reunion.

Farris thought mostly of the friends she'd be seeing in North Platte after qualifying in four individual events during Wednesday's Class C district meet at Doane's Simon Field.

She also realized that the friends she's most interested in seeing will also be her stiffest competitors for gold medal honors.

Farris remained unbeaten in all four of her specialties Wednesday, turning in times of 11.5 in the 80 hurdles, 11.7 in the 100, 26.1 in the 220 and a distance of 18-8 1/2 in the long jump.

But those same specialties also boast close friends. Nancy Kindig of Hastings St. Cecilia (hurdles, 220 and long jump) and North Platte's Cindy Tatum (100 and 220).

We're really good friends, Farris said of Kindig. I look forward more to just seeing her out there than competing against her. She even sent me a Christmas card last year.

Tatum is also a good friend ever since competing in a demanding summer track program with the Tecumseh ace.

I never really get a real grudge against them, Farris said. I just like seeing them again.

When it comes down to race and jump time against her friends though, Farris hopes to be ready.

I've probably got my best chance for first place in the 220, Farris said. But the long jump is my favorite event. It'll probably take 25.0 or 25.2 to win Class C. You always get scared out there and run faster.

Farris was a little disappointed in her marks except for the long jump when her mark was six inches better than her previous best.

My goal was 19 feet this year, she said. And still is. It helps me that I know I'm getting closer now.

I think of records everytime she runs, Tecumseh coach

Marcee Muller noted. We've been disappointed in the times although this track is not like a hard surface. She's a hard worker and she really came through in the long jump. I hope she remains unbeaten in all four events.

Farris' hurdle best of 10.8 is well behind Kindig's 10.1, however, and her 18-8 1/2 long jump also follows Kindig's 19-3 1/2, but she rates a 25.6 best in the 220 while Kindig owns a 25.3.

Farris' 10.8 100 time leads Class C, but trails Class A's Tatum and Liz Lee of Grand Island at 10.6.

Elmwood's Janet Bornemeier, the overall leader in the 440, also qualified with four firsts, three individuals and one relay.

Bornemeier clocked 1:18 in the 100, 26.7 in the 220 and 59.9 in the 440 along with the anchor leg in a winning 4:26.1 mile relay.

Bornemeier's efforts led Elmwood to the district D-1 team title while Weeping Water won the Class C division.

Centerfielder Rick Mondav is batting .370 with the Chicago Cubs and 1,000 in the hearts of America's patriots. Miss Illinois Teen-Ager Mary Lyn Valkenberg helps Mondav display the flag he rescued recently in Los Angeles.

Call Rick Monday A U.S. Folk Hero

Chicago (UPI) — Rick Monday, the Chicago Cubs center fielder, became a folk hero of sorts April 25 when he snatched the American flag from the playing field in the Los Angeles Dodgers' home park ( Chavez Ravine) to keep two intruders from burning it.

Now he's embarrassed and staggered by the aftermath.

He's flooded with mail, including letters from former President Nixon, presidential candidate George Wallace, and throngs of fans. He has not yet heard from the White House, but he said a presidential aide told him a message was in the mail or he'd hear from the President by phone.

It's staggering to think that many people took the time to write to me, he said. I'm very proud about the whole situation. I was a little embarrassed.

The reason why I did it goes with the way I was brought up by my parents, the schooling, the respect I have for the American flag and for this country. The flag was presented to me as something other than an item you decorate a room with or run up a flagpole in front of your house. I think there were 25,000 people or so in the park and I honestly believe that if the same people had been in the same geographical location on the field, I feel that many, many, there would have taken the same action that I did, and hopefully that they would.

I don't like to see people use the United States of America and the flag that represents it or the integrity of the game of baseball to see somebody make a demonstration of that sort.

Mondav said his three-year-old son saw a photograph of the incident in a newspaper and asked him, 'Daddy, is that you?' I told him yes, and what was going on, and he said, 'Are they naughty men?' There's a three-year-old that recognizes the importance of the flag and our country.

Before the Cubs played the Dodgers on Tuesday, Monday was presented the flag he rescued. Al Campanis, vice president of the Dodgers, and also heard the public reading of a resolution passed unanimously the Illinois Legislature declaring Tuesday as Rick Mondav Day.

Jensen Loses Weight, Gains Bowling Crowns

By BOB MOYER

What a man Max Jensen do for an encore. In the 1975-76 season, Jensen

Won the state all events title for the first time.

Won his fourth city all events title and third in the past four seasons.

Averaged 235, 221 and 217 in three different leagues.

Moreover, Jensen's double all events victory represented a first by a Lincolnite. Previously, only Jim Hill and Bill Koehler won a non-team event in both city and state, capturing double doubles titles in 1962.

I was very pleased to win the state title, says Jensen. It's an important victory, especially since I can now be the state representative in the ABC masters tournament next year.

Jensen said he was pleased with his score, which was shot the first weekend of the tourney, held at Tonka Lakes, and Henry's Bowl in Beatrice this year.

I didn't think it would hold up, though, says Jensen. There are at least 15-20 guys capable of shooting the score I had 1977, but the condition was really tough this year. It gets a lot harder to shoot my score when you know you have to and the strikes aren't coming so easily.

If the state tourney win just caps off a great year for me, says Jensen. There's no question this has been my best year. Jensen credits several factors leading to his outstanding efforts this past season.

I took off a lot of weight at the first of the year, which really helped me, especially my endurance, says Jensen. In fact, I plan to not bowl this summer so I can lose some more weight.

Jensen also feels not being on the pro tour has helped.

Being away from the tour has settled my mind on current local conditions. I think more clearly now in area tournaments.

Jensen also feels a different approach to the game helped him this season.

Before, I had too much ball power, which is not needed on today's conditions, says Jensen.

This year, I lined up straighter to the pocket and threw less ball, which gave me increased pin carry. It's really been an enlightening experience this season.

Some observers feel Jensen may be a better bowler now than he was during his pro touring days.

I don't know if that's true, says Jensen. I'd like to think that it is true, though.

Max Jensen, Nebraska Titlest

I'm a stranger, think now, than I was, adds Max. But physically there are times when I can overpower the lanes like I used to be able to.

The one thing Jensen didn't accomplish this year was shooting 800, a feat he has accomplished before, but would dearly like to do again.

I averaged 227 in the Sunday Morning League at Elgin. As you know, I had a lot of homers, 4,000, but I just couldn't get the ball in the hole, Jensen says, whose best series for the year was 799.

Now that the season's over, there's no doubt why Jensen's next goal is

I would like to do it all over again, he says.

Dodgers Batter Cubs, 14-12

By United Press International

The Los Angeles Dodgers set a club record for home runs, 7, and season highs in hits, 16, and in runs Wednesday to pummel the Chicago Cubs, 14-12, and extend their winning streak to 11 games.

Bobby Tolan hit two of the Dodgers' homers and belted in three runs. Ed Gooden hit a pinch-homer to drive in three runs, and Bill Buckner, Ron Cey, Bill Russell and Steve Yeager contributed one homer apiece.

The previous Dodger single game home run record was six on Aug. 20, 1974, also at Wrigley Field in Chicago.

Rick Monday was the Cubs' batting star, driving in six runs with a pair of three-run homers, while John Surrobbio batted in four runs with three hits. The two teams thus combined to hit nine home runs, with a 21-mile-per-hour wind being a major factor in the home ballpark.

In other games, Philadelphia trounced Houston, 6-0, in a marathon battle, New York 2-0 in 11 innings, Pittsburgh defeated San Francisco, 6-1, St. Louis shut out Atlanta 4-0, and St. Louis shaded Montreal 6-4.

Bobby Tolan hit a grand slam homer and pinch-hitter Ollie Brown added a two-run homer as the Phillies rallied for six runs in the sixth inning to beat Houston.

George Foster and Ken Griffey singled home runs in the fifth inning to give the Reds their victory over New York behind the combined seven-hit pitching of Gary Nolen and Rawly Eastworth.

The Montreal opened the Reds' fifth by drawing a walk off reliever Tom Hall and with one out stole second. Tony Perez was given an intentional walk but Foster fouled the strategy by attempting a single to left to score Morgan Griffey, a late-inning replacement. Followed with a line single to right to score Perez.

Al Oliver went three for three in leading a two-run homer in his first career start, April 26, and Duane Davis scratched a two-run homer to power the Pirates past San Francisco.

Southwest Point, Fla., got four for his first victory for the Cubs by shutting out the Braves on four hits over 7 1/2 innings as the Cardinals handed Atlanta its ninth straight loss.

Doug Rader, three-run homer, highlighted a four-run rally in the sixth inning, but carried the Padres over Montreal.

The Padres exploded against Montreal starter pitcher Steve Rogers with two home runs apiece. Tim Lincecum fouled and scored on a single by Willie Davis to tie the score at 1-1. Willie McCutchen, who had hit a two-run homer in the first inning, fouled and scored on a single by Rogers, hit his second home run in the sixth, and put San Diego in front.

In the American League, Oakland's Reggie Smith was hit by a single and drove home three runs to spark an 8-4 victory for the Kansas City Royals over the Baltimore Orioles in the sixth straight loss for the American League champions.

Rosie knocked in the winning runs in the seventh inning. As a result, Hal M. Rice and Joe Nelson also walked off this on to leave Tom House, because Rader stroked a two-run single to left putting Kansas City ahead 8-2. Rader's sacrifice fly also capped a three-run ninth inning.

rally by the Royals.

The Red Sox threatened in the eighth when they loaded the bases. When Jim Jensen and Fred Lynn walked and Carlton Fisk reached on an error by third baseman George Brett, but they were taken out of a big inning when Carl Yastrzemski lined into a double play. Jim Rice knocked in Lynn and Johnson with a double to left with two on.

Pete Spillane's 2-2 went seven runs into the eighth when he could not get a hit and all four Boston runs fell on Jenkins in the 14th went six innings, driving up nine hits and three runs.

In their careers, Minnesota's Josh Lober of St. Paul, Boston's Fred Lynn of Chicago 2-0 and Texas' Al Michaels was postponed because of wet grounds.

Jim Palmer gave up a first-inning lead to strike out Pat Kelly and then pitched Chicago until he was out in the ninth, pitching the Orioles over the White Sox. In pitching the seventh two batters of his career, Palmer walked two and struck out six to run his season's record to 4-3.

Gilliam Switches To Atlanta

Morning Briefing

John Gilliam, one of the premier wide receivers of the NFL over the past decade, signed as a free agent with the Atlanta Falcons and said if he could not have come to terms with the Falcons he would have returned to the Minnesota Vikings. Gilliam played out his option with the Vikings May 1.

Gilliam, a South Carolina native, was the No. 2 draft choice of the New Orleans Saints in 1967. "I wanted to play for Atlanta all along," he said. "It wasn't the money I've had my home and some businesses in Atlanta for the past eight years and wanted to play out my career here."

Other Football

Dick Nolan, former coach of the San Francisco 49ers, and Ron Waller, former coach of the Philadelphia Bell in the WFL, were added to the 1976 College All Star coaching staff by head coach Ara Parseghian, former coach at Notre Dame.

Six former NFL players have signed with the Los Angeles Rams of the NFL. The group includes Mel Rogers, a linebacker who played with Philadelphia in the WFL after three seasons with the San Diego Chargers. Others signed were linebacker Frank Johnson, wide receiver Eddie Richardson, center Ron Keeman, punter Rusty Jackson and cornerback Gregg Butler.

Two of the Washington Redskins' draft choices last month had college football eligibility left and were not eligible for the NFL draft. The players involved are Bryan Fryer, a wide receiver from Alberta University and Quinn Buckner, a defensive back from Indiana. Both will be placed in a supplemental draft pool and will be available for selection for the 1976 season if they graduate.

Alabama quarterback Richard Todd and All America offensive guard Randy Johnson of Georgia were among the first seven players chosen for the East team in the Coaches All-America football game in Lubbock, Tex., June 19.

The Iowa State football team elected four co-captains for the 1976 season. They are quarterback Wayne Stanley, offensive guard Dave Greenwood, linebacker Maynard Stensrud and defensive back Tony Hawkins.

Hockey

The Phoenix Roadrunners of the World Hockey Association fired coach Sandy Hucl when they disclosed that they had refused to renew his contract for next season.

Paul Shmyr, captain of the WHA Cleveland Crusaders, was named defenseman of the year by the WHA in a vote of media around the league.

Wingers Bob Schumatz and Wayne Cashman of the Boston Bruins will miss the remainder of the Stanley Cup Playoffs because of serious knee injuries, but center Jean Ratelle might play Thursday night.

Horse Racing

Lite's Hope will join Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes as a Laz Barrera-trained entry in the Preakness. Lite's Hope won the Illinois Derby last Saturday at Sportsman's Park. Unbeaten Zen will not run in the Preakness, according to a spokesman.

A striking picket at Golden Gate Fields was arrested and charged with possession of a loaded weapon outside the stable gate.

Other Sports

Cohn Chapman, British technical manager of the Lotus Racing team, was acquitted of the charge for the death of Grand Prix driver Jochen Rindt. Technicians said the accident happened because of the break of the axle-shaft.

Top seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain beat Chris Letcher, 6-0, 6-4, in the first round of the $50,000 Javanian International tennis championships.

The Muhammad Ali-Jimmy Young fight last Friday drew a Nielsen rating of 25.4 or 46 per cent of the total audience. This means 55 million viewers watched all or part of the fight on ABC. The Buffalo-Boston NBA playoff game at the same time on CBS was seven per cent of the audience.

Two-time winner Jack Nicklaus heads the field in the $200,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic which begins Thursday.

The Kansas City Royals reactivated Dave Nelson so he could resume his designated hitting role and to make room for him they asked for waivers on Ray Sadecki, the lefthanded relief pitcher who has been in major league baseball for 16 years.

The departure of the American Basketball Association Spirits from St. Louis will likely be approved Thursday when league trustees meet in New York according to principal owner Ozzie Silna.

When asked if the request was to move to Salt Lake City, Silna said, "That appears to be the most likely area."

Hube Brown, coach of the ABA Kentucky Colonels, confirmed he is a leading candidate for the head coaching job with the NBA Atlanta Hawks.

Joachim, Sarpy Top Ak Horses

Omaha Joachim and Miss Sarpy County were the top horses here Wednesday at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Joachim, a 3-year-old Proud Champion colt, sped to a 1:09.35 clocking over the 6-furlongs in the fourth race to be King of the Cure for the fastest 3-minute timing this season. Owned by Mrs. Edith Pratt and Jack Van Berg, he was ridden by David Whited.

A seven-length winner, Joachim returned $3.60, $2.80 and $2.60 as the 4-5 favorite.

Miss Sarpy County, owned by Paul E. White of Omaha, came from off the pace to win the featured seventh race — a 6-furlong hunt for fillies and mares with a $10,000 purse.

The 6-year-old mare paid $3.80, $3.80 and $3.40 for her half-length triumph over Ruby Satan and Scarlet Nymph.

NU Track Team Eyes Missouri

Frank Sevigne's Nebraska track team, fresh from last weekend's 91-63 triumph over Iowa State, will travel to Columbia Saturday for a dual meet with the Missouri Tigers.

As he has all year, junior javelin thrower Scott Sorchik will lead Nebraska against Missouri. Last week against the Cyclones, Sorchik set a new school record with a throw of 244.5.

Also pacing the Huskers are senior hurdler Chuck Mahito, freshman sprinter Ray Mahoney and sophomore weightman Steve Millard. All were double winners against Iowa State.

According to the Big 8's latest track statistics, Missouri is led by freshman sprinter Dele Udo, junior middle distance man Brad Reese, sophomore hurdler Godwin Obasogie and senior weightman Ben Plucknett.

Saturday's dual meet against the Tigers will be Nebraska's last action before the Big 8 Outdoor Championships, held in Lincoln on May 14-15.

Nebraska's tennis team, 14-11 on the year, travels to Omaha Friday to face UNO, then returns to Lincoln Saturday for a dual against Offutt Air Force Base.

Friday's UNO match starts at 3 p.m. on the Maverick varsity courts and Saturday's Offutt contest begins at 2 p.m. on the Husker varsity courts.

Following the Offutt match, Nebraska's next contest will be the Big 8 Championships at Oklahoma City on May 12-14.

Chones To Miss Celtics Series

Boston (UPI) — The Cleveland Cavaliers will be without starting center Jim Chones for the entire NBA Eastern Conference playoff series against the Boston Celtics, it was announced Wednesday.

X rays showed Chones, injured in practice Tuesday, suffered a broken little toe in his right foot. He broke the same bone in 1975 had his foot placed in a cast.

"He's out, it's as simple as that," said coach Bill Fitch, who led the Cavs past Washington in a seven-game Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The former Marquette star averaged 15 points and seven rebounds per game against the Bulls.

When the series gets underway Thursday night at Boston Garden, Chones will be replaced either by veteran reserve Nate Thurmond or forward Jim Brewer, who is the same size as Boston's 6-foot-9 center, Dave

Outdoor Report

Nebraska's spring turkey hunters have been having a hard time of it this season, as conditions worked against them on opening weekend, and again last Saturday and Sunday.

Various combinations of cool temperatures, rain, snow and wind have made the birds a bit spooky and reluctant to come to the call. The same cool and windy weather this past weekend worked against fishermen, also.

According to reports of Game and Parks Commission conservation officers in the field, outdoor activity includes:

Panhandle

Lake Ogallala — occasional perch to 1 1/2 pounds at the spillway on worms; catfish to 6 pounds on shad eaters.

Lake McConaughy — walleye at the dam on artificials during the day, jugs at night; walleye to 8 pounds in Martin Bay and much of the east part of the lake on drift-fished minnows.

Bridgeport State Recreation Area — a few walleye to 1 1/2 pounds on minnows.

Sand Hills

Farm ponds (Custer County) — a few bluegill; (Holt County) — some Master Angler-size largemouth bass taking surface lures.

Long Pine and Plum creeks — a few brown trout taking spinners and worms.

Northeast

Fremont State Recreation Area — a few pansize crappie, bluegill and rock bass; some largemouth bass to 2 pounds, all on worms.

Gavins Point Dam Tailwaters (Crotton) — occasional sauger to 2 pounds and a few white bass, both hitting minnows in the stilling basin; carp to 5 pounds on corn.

Southeast

Alexandria State Recreation Area — bluegill on worms.

Farm ponds (Jefferson and Gage counties) — good success on catfish and largemouth bass.

Branched Oak Lake (Malcolm) — bass to 4 pounds on minnows and artificials; some walleye on minnows and artificials; crappie to 1 pound on small minnows in the bays; a few bluegill and bullheads on worms.

Pawnee Lake (Emerald) — crappie on minnows; bluegill taking worms.

Hord State Recreation Area — good success on bass to 2 pounds and crappie to 12 inches, both on artificials.

Mormon Island State Wayside Area (Grand Island) — crappie and bass taking artificials.
